Charleston's Bond Issue Carries for Second Time

Income Tax Hike Favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Increases in the personal income tax are the most suitable levies for cooling an overheated economy, the Treasury Department's top tax expert told Congress today.

But Stanley S. Surrey, an assistant secretary of the Treasury, said it should be coupled with a corresponding increase in the corporation tax.

Simplicity, speed, certainty and acceptability are key criteria for a tax program designed to dampen inflationary trends, Surry told a Senate-House Economic subcommittee.

Surrey suggested no firm formula but a 5 per cent boost in personal income taxes, coupled with a corporate tax increase, is one possible package the administration could propose if it felt a tax boost were needed.

President Johnson indicated Tuesday that he might seek a tax boost as early as next month if prices continue to rise.

A 5 per cent increase in individual taxes would remove about $2.5 billion from the economy.

Coupling this with a two-point increase in corporation taxes—from 48 to 50 per cent—would raise about $4 billion in revenue each year. A one-point boost in corporate taxes increases revenues by about $700 million.

These percentages could be varied up and down depending on how much money the administration decided it wanted to remove from the economy — if it made that decision at all.

Shelter Need Told to Club

Bill Pickett talked about the need of fallout shelters to protect the residents against a possible atomic bomb attack.

A shoe store manager, he teaches an adult education economic opportunity class at the high school and also serves as radiological defense officer along with Bud Tetley. Tetley was in charge of the Kiwanis club program and introduced Bill Pickett last night at the Holiday Inn.

Instruments were displayed to show how radiation in the air can be measured. Places in Sikeston are set up and approved by them as fallout shelters. Among them are the two new banks. New churches being built should be designed to meet specifications, Pickett said.

George Kirk was appointed as delegate to represent the club at the Kiwanis International Convention in Portland in June.

Lieut. Gov. Denver Fike, Caruthersville, has scheduled a visit to the Club next Tuesday. New members who will be inducted then are Rev. C. D. Butler, Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, Bub Tetley, and Herb Cathey.

High School Again Approved, 1,345-295

CHARLESTON -- The percentage of voters in favor of the $1,400,000 high school building bond issue in yesterday's election was higher than in the first election, but the number of votes cast fell short of the original number.

Yesterday's vote was 1,345 to 295.

In the 1965 election, there were 2,307 votes cast.

In Charleston the vote was 1,091 to 167.

Of the votes cast, 82 per cent were in favor of the bonds for the R-1 school district building.

In last year's election, 79 per cent of the votes cast favored the bonds.

W. R. Pierce, supt. of schools, said that he thought this lighter vote was because it was an issue being rehashed.

"However, it is indicative that the people of this district want the best possible schooling for their children," Pierce said.

He thinks the new bonds will be sold within three weeks.

Two of the polling places failed to carry the required two-thirds majority, Anniston and Bertrant.

In Anniston the vote was 26 for and 44 opposed.

At Bertrand, the vote was 51 to 37.

At Wyatt, there were 177 votes for and 77 opposed.

The reason for the second bond election was that the bonds were ruled invalid by bond attorneys March 2 due to reorganization that took place after the 1965 bond election and before the bonds could be sold.

This is the first time that voters from the Texas Bend, Thompson Bend and Bertrand school districts voted on the issue.

They were included due to reorganization last year into the Charleston R-1 school district.

Construction of the new high school began earlier this month and it is expected that it will be completed during the early part of 1967.

Redistricting Attention Turns To South State

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House Redistricting Commission turned its attention today to southern Missouri in the third and final day of public hearings.

The commission's final plan for reapportioning the 163 House seats must be filed with Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick by midnight Saturday.

Tuesday, House members from Boone, Pike and Dent counties pleaded with the commission to keep their counties intact.

They included Reps. Margot Patterson, D - Boone county, Paul Williams, D-Pike County, and William E. Seay, D-Dent County.

Bourbon and Perche townships were transferred from Boone to Randolph County under the commission's tentative plan.

William charged historic Pike County, which once stretched as far west as the Pacific, was abused more than any other county when it lost four townships to a district including, Ralls, Monroe and a part of Marion County.

He urged the commission to re-examine the whole 9th Congressional District and said it could be mapped out without splitting any counties.

Contract to Dexter Firm

NEW MADRID -- New Madrid county's public water district number 1 last week awarded a contract for the construction of a water supply system to the McMullin Excavation Company at Dexter.

McMullin submitted the low bid of $69,745.33. Work on the system will begin within 30 days from the date of the contract, and the company is allowed 210 days to complete it.

The water system will be available to approximately 200 residents of South Lilbourn, (Delmo Housing Corporation) Howardville, and residents between and adjacent to South Lilbourn and Howardville.

Easter Rites On Levee

NEW MADRID -- Plans have been completed for the annual Easter sunrise service at 6 a.m. April 10, on the levee overlooking the Mississippi River.

This service is sponsored by members of the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Pentecostal churches of New Madrid, Kewanee, Marston and Lilbourn and is conducted by their laymen.

Feature attraction of the annual service will be a pageant portraying events leading to and including the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The four major scenes to be enacted are the Lord's Last Supper, in the garden of Gethsemane, the arrest and crucifixion and the resurrection.

Music will be furnished by choir members of the churches.

Seating facilities and an altar are being placed at the scene, which is on the river side of the levee west of the Kings-highway intersection of Water street.

The public is invited.

Shantz Named Agency Head

WASHINGTON AP -- Leroy F. Shantz, former director of Missouri's Division of Employment Security, has been appointed chief of the Division of Immigration Services of the U. S. Employment Service, the Labor Department announced today.

Shantz will be in charge of the Labor Department's responsibilities for certifying all aliens applying for admission as permanent immigrants to work in this country.

Shantz was director of the Missouri Employment Security Division from 1961-65. Last year he directed a Labor Department program to recruit and train counselors to work with poor youths.

The U. S. is the fifth largest country in area in the world — behind the Soviet Union, Canada, China and Brazil.

Johnson Wins Victory On Two of His Programs

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has won his first major congressional victory of 1966 with House approval of funds for his rent subsidy and Teacher Corps programs. But it took some help from Republicans.

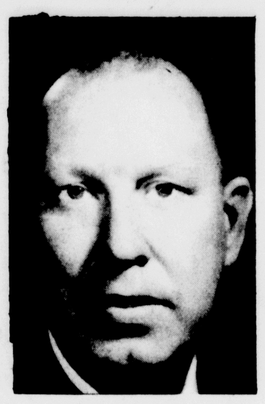
A $2.56-billion catch-all appropriation bill passed late Tuesday by the House included money to start the two new "Great Society" projects.

The 269-122 roll-call vote that sent the bill to the Senate after six hours of partisan debate did not reflect the closeness of the battles over the two main issues involved.

Both the rent subsidy program for low-income tenants and the Teachers Corps to help educate children of poor families were approved last year by Congress, but the money to get them started was not provided in the final appropriation bill of 1965.

Republicans who argued that now is not the time to spend federal funds on new domestic programs not related to the war in Viet Nam tried to eliminate money for both the programs.

They centered their fire on the rent subsidy plan designed to promote construction of housing by nonprofit groups for rental to low-income families, with the government paying part of the rent. None of the payments would go to private landlords.



Henry S. Bussey

Bussey Will Direct United Fund Drive

Henry S. Bussey, cemetery officer, was chosen president of the 1966-67 United Fund drive, at a meeting Tuesday at the junior high school.

Board members of the Sikeston United Fund are Bill Burke, Lee Shell, John Harper, Jim Green, Charles D. Springs Jr., Jerry Aufdenberg, Bert Rowe Jr., Carl Campbell, Dwight Crader, and Mrs. Jewell Allen, secretary.

Bussey and his wife live at 117 East Gladys St.

Battle to Avoid Trap

SAIGON (AP) — Two hundred U.S. cavalrymen battled against entrapment by a strong Communist force tonight in the central highlands 12 miles southwest of Pleiku. American artillery hammered at the Red lines.

Several troop-carrying helicopters were shot down. One was a heavy - duty Chinook that exploded over the cavalrymen's landing zone in a clearing of the Chu Phong Mountain range, complicating further helicopter landings.

"We're taking a lot of Spook fire," a lieutenant reported by radio to his headquarters in Pleiku, 240 miles north of Saigon. This probably meant the enemy was shooting at the cavalrymen from all directions.

AP photographer Rick Merron reported in a dispatch from Pleiku that the fight started at noon when a detachment of about 50 men from the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Divison ran into heavy enemy fire. A 150-man company flew in to help.

A North Vietnamese soldier was captured and he told the Americans there were 1,000 well-armed Viet Cong in the sector.

Elsewhere U.S. planes destroyed at least 150 Communist buildings, set off 14 big explosions and killed 35 or more Viet Cong in 24 hours of intensive bombardment in South Viet Nam, a U.S. spokesman announced.

26 Nurses to Be Trained

A telegram announced that a federal grant of $78,007 to train 26 practical nurses in Sikeston has been approved, according to U. S. Sen. Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long and Congressman Paul C. Jones.

The trainees will be assigned to the public schools, with training quarters in the board of education building and at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

The one-year program will open May 16, according to Mrs. Clare Eisenbach, R.N., with 18 of the trainees to be assigned to the Sikeston hospital, and eight to the Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett.

Applications will be taken at the State Employment office, 202 South Kingshighway.

Budget Before House

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House completed advancing the billion dollar budget Tuesday and set about the task today of passing the bills so they can go to the Senate.

In first round arguments, the House staved off a dozen amendments and took only one —a $10,000 reduction the Department of Corrections asked for the penitentiary appropriation.

One rejected on a lopsided vote would have stripped from the Moberly Training Center for men a $1,900,000 fund for construction of a third dormitory wing.

Rep. Ralph Wigfield, D-Livingston County, said it was wrong to provide what he called plush accommodations for convicts when school classrooms and better facilities for the mentally ill are sorely needed.

Also rejected were efforts to reduce construction money for the University of Missouri.

One was a $700,000 item for completion of the controversial livestock center and the other was an attempt to cut back to $250,000 the university's allotment for major repairs. The governor recommended $250,000 but the House Appropriations committee doubled that figure and it was kept in the bill.

Tuesday night the House Education Committee approved a bill to increase school foundation aid by $10 million, as Gov. Warren E. Hearnes had recommended.

Another administration bill to prevent school districts from using for other purposes state aid allotted for teacher salaries was defeated by the committee.

Grain Offered To India

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson offered India today an extra 3.5 million tons of grain to help head off hunger for a friendly people.

His offer came as Mrs. Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India, took off for New York ending two days of talks with the President and other top U.S. officials.

In those talks, Johnson had given her strong assurances of U.S. help in meeting India's food emergency and long-range needs for economic development.

In addition to the grain, the President also proposed allotting 150 million pounds of vegetable oils, up to 125 million pounds of milk powder, 325,000 to 700,000 bales of cotton, and 2 million to 4 million pounds of tobacco.

In a special message to Congress, Johnson asked for endorsement of this action and "the strong and warmhearted and generous support of this program by the American people."

"India is a good and deserving friend," he said.

The extra 3.5 million tons of grain he offered India would be bread grains, mainly wheat. He invited other nations to match that amount and voiced delight that Canada was prepared to provide a million tons of wheat and flour.

India, the President said, estimates 6 to 7 million tons of food grain will be necessary through next December beyond amounts already committed or expected.

Mrs. Gandhi, before leaving for New York and Home, said the talks with Johnson brought closer understanding and renewed friendship.

Artist Maxfield Parrish Dies

PLAINFIELD, N.H. (AP) — Maxfield Parrish, 95, an artist who won fame as a magazine illustrator and muralist, died today.

Parrish was born in Philadelphia in 1870, the son of Stephen Parrish, himself an internationally known painter and etcher.

The son started out as an illustrator of magazine articles and books for children such as "The Arabian Nights" and a Eugene Field collection of childhood poems.

He soon became one of the highest-paid painters of magazine covers, featuring etherally beautiful girls against scenic backgrounds.

Faked Papers Involved in 2-City Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI arrested 38 men in daybreak raids today and said they have cracked draft-dodging schemes in New York and Cleveland which involved sale of fake enlistment papers for up to $5,000.

The raids netted 33 men in New York, including nine fathers and eight of their sons.

Five men involved in the Cleveland operation were arrested in that city; in Akron, Ohio; Chicago and Albany, N.Y., the FBI said.

The New York operation was cracked last month, officials said, with the arrest of two men accused of supplying fake enlistment papers for from $1,500 to $5,000 —whatever the traffic would bear.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Leonard Pheberge said Solomon Gottfried, 56, a civil service worker who was once in the Air Force, had obtained a number of official Defense Department forms — No. DD-44, which is used to notify draft boards that a person has enlisted in a military unit.

Pheberge said the customers were recruited by Paul G. Miller, 28, of Flushing, Queens, N.Y., a department store credit authorizer.

The prosecutor said Gottfried, who filled out the forms, got $200 to $400 per customer, with the rest going to Miller.

The pair, he said, had netted up to $80,000 since 1963.

In Cleveland, Special FBI agent Earl E. Brown said two National Guardmen — Frank M. Kovach Jr., 22 of Parma, Ohio, and Donald Taylor, 29, of Cleveland, charged up to $600 to forward papers to draft boards showing that the men had enlisted in the Guard.

Kovach and Taylor were accused of aiding and abetting draft evasion.

The raids came on a day when the Defense Department issued a call for a draft of 34,600 men in May, the most since January.

Lady Bird's Throat Better

Deering Boy Dies In Blast

DEERING, Mo. (AP)—A 17-year-old boy died today of injuries apparently received while dynamiting stumps on a farm near Deering Tuesday.

Scott Pacifico of Deering died in a Hayti hospital. A man working with Scott, H. G. Mansfield, 61, of Deering, was reported in critical condition at the hospital.

The sheriff's office said the youth's uncle, J. B. McDonald, said he found his nephew and Mansfield lying on the ground near a dynamited stump in the field.

Credit Curb Voted for LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking and Currency Committee today voted to give President Johnson authority to control installment buying as a means of combating inflation.

The action, taken virtually unanimously, would restore powers used during the Korean War to fix the size of down payments and the length of time for repayment of installment purchases.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., who offered the amendment, said he checked with the White House before doing so and was told there was no objection to the committee action.

The amendment was offered to a bill extending for two years the Defense Production Act, which authorizes a series of government actions designed to insure smooth operating of the economy during emergencies.

Spradling Urges Funds for Hospital

JEFFERSON CITY -- State Sen. A. M. Spradling Jr., of Caoe Girardeau has gone to bat for Hill-Burton funds for the Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston.

He recently wrote Austin Hill, chairman of the hospital advisory council, about the urgent need of additional facilities at the hospital. A copy was mailed to Charles L. Blanton, Jr., Sikeston publisher.

The letter read:

"It is my understanding that the Hospital Advisory Council will meet in the near future in order to distribute Hill-Burton aid throughout the State of Missouri. As you know, Sikeston, Missouri, has an application presently pending for Hill-Burton aid and this city is in my senatorial district.

"There is an extremely urgent need for hospital beds in the Sikeston hospital. I am sure that your Council has been advised of the conditions but I did once more desire to point out to you that there are patients in the halls in all wings of both floors of the hospital; that a friend of mine recently needed a physical examination and had to wait four days for a hospital bed in Sikeston. This particular hospital serves not only Scott County, but also Mississippi and New Madrid Counties. I sincerely hope that the Council will give every consideration to extending Hill-Burton aid to the Sikeston Hoscil that the money spent there will help to take care of one of the most urgent needs for hospital beds in the State of Missouri.

"I am sending you additional copies of this letter so that you might be able to distribute them to each member of the Council and if I can be of further assistance to the Council in explaining the extremely urgent nature of the Sikeston appeal, I shall be most happy to appear before the Council or to obtain for them any information available. Your consideration will be gratefully appreciated by the people of Scott County, as well as those other people in the counties served by this fine hospital. Needless to say, with Medicare becoming effective July 1, there is going to be an even greater need in this area for hospital beds.

"The people of the Sikeston community have contributed heavily toward their portion of the needed funds and I sincerely hope that the Missouri Hospital Advisory Council will recognize the local effort and the fact that the help they will be giving will be greatly appreciated."

His offer came as Mrs. Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India, took off for New York ending two days of talks with the President and other top U.S. officials.

In those talks, Johnson had given her strong assurances of U.S. help in meeting India's food emergency and long-range needs for economic development.

In addition to the grain, the President also proposed allotting 150 million pounds of vegetable oils, up to 125 million pounds of milk powder, 325,000 to 700,000 bales of cotton, and 2 million to 4 million pounds of tobacco.

In a special message to Congress, Johnson asked for endorsement of this action and "the strong and warmhearted and generous support of this program by the American people."

"India is a good and deserving friend," he said.

The extra 3.5 million tons of grain he offered India would be bread grains, mainly wheat. He invited other nations to match that amount and voiced delight that Canada was prepared to provide a million tons of wheat and flour.

India, the President said, estimates 6 to 7 million tons of food grain will be necessary through next December beyond amounts already committed or expected.

Mrs. Gandhi, before leaving for New York and Home, said the talks with Johnson brought closer understanding and renewed friendship.

Shelter Need Told to Club

Bill Pickett talked about the need of fallout shelters to protect the residents against a possible atomic bomb attack.

A shoe store manager, he teaches an adult education economic opportunity class at the high school and also serves as radiological defense officer along with Bud Tetley. Tetley was in charge of the Kiwanis club program and introduced Bill Pickett last night at the Holiday Inn.

Instruments were displayed to show how radiation in the air can be measured. Places in Sikeston are set up and approved by them as fallout shelters. Among them are the two new banks. New churches being built should be designed to meet specifications, Pickett said.

George Kirk was appointed as delegate to represent the club at the Kiwanis International Convention in Portland in June.

Lieut. Gov. Denver Fike, Caruthersville, has scheduled a visit to the Club next Tuesday. New members who will be inducted then are Rev. C. D. Butler, Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, Bub Tetley, and Herb Cathey.

Contract to Dexter Firm

NEW MADRID -- New Madrid county's public water district number 1 last week awarded a contract for the construction of a water supply system to the McMullin Excavation Company at Dexter.

McMullin submitted the low bid of $69,745.33. Work on the system will begin within 30 days from the date of the contract, and the company is allowed 210 days to complete it.

The water system will be available to approximately 200 residents of South Lilbourn, (Delmo Housing Corporation) Howardville, and residents between and adjacent to South Lilbourn and Howardville.

Shantz Named Agency Head

WASHINGTON AP -- Leroy F. Shantz, former director of Missouri's Division of Employment Security, has been appointed chief of the Division of Immigration Services of the U. S. Employment Service, the Labor Department announced today.

Shantz will be in charge of the Labor Department's responsibilities for certifying all aliens applying for admission as permanent immigrants to work in this country.

Shantz was director of the Missouri Employment Security Division from 1961-65. Last year he directed a Labor Department program to recruit and train counselors to work with poor youths.

The U. S. is the fifth largest country in area in the world -- behind the Soviet Union, Canada, China and Brazil.

26 Nurses to Be Trained

A telegram announced that a federal grant of $78,007 to train 26 practical nurses in Sikeston has been approved, according to U. S. Sen. Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long and Congressman Paul C. Jones.

The trainees will be assigned to the public schools, with training quarters in the board of education building and at the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

The one-year program will open May 16, according to Mrs. Clare Eisenbach, R.N., with 18 of the trainees to be assigned to the Sikeston hospital, and eight to the Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett.

Applications will be taken at the State Employment office, 202 South Kingshighway.

Johnson Wins Victory On Two of His Programs

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has won his first major congressional victory of 1966 with House approval of funds for his rent subsidy and Teacher Corps programs. But it took some help from Republicans.

A $2.56-billion catch-all appropriation bill passed late Tuesday by the House included money to start the two new "Great Society" projects.

The 269-122 roll-call vote that sent the bill to the Senate after six hours of partisan debate did not reflect the closeness of the battles over the two main issues involved.

Both the rent subsidy program for low-income tenants and the Teachers Corps to help educate children of poor families were approved last year by Congress, but the money to get them started was not provided in the final appropriation bill of 1965.

Republicans who argued that now is not the time to spend federal funds on new domestic programs not related to the war in Viet Nam tried to eliminate money for both the programs.

They centered their fire on the rent subsidy plan designed to promote construction of housing by nonprofit groups for rental to low-income families, with the government paying part of the rent. None of the payments would go to private landlords.

TALLYING of the votes last night at the Junior Chamber of Commerce election was handled by Bruce Hampton, a former president of the organization.

Faked Papers Involved in 2-City Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI arrested 38 men in daybreak raids today and said they have cracked draft-dodging schemes in New York and Cleveland which involved sale of fake enlistment papers for up to $5,000.

The raids netted 33 men in New York, including nine fathers and eight of their sons.

Five men involved in the Cleveland operation were arrested in that city; in Akron, Ohio; Chicago and Albany, N.Y., the FBI said.

The New York operation was cracked last month, officials said, with the arrest of two men accused of supplying fake enlistment papers for from $1,500 to $5,000 —whatever the traffic would bear.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Leonard Pheberge said Solomon Gottfried, 56, a civil service worker who was once in the Air Force, had obtained a number of official Defense Department forms — No. DD-44, which is used to notify draft boards that a person has enlisted in a military unit.

Pheberge said the customers were recruited by Paul G. Miller, 28, of Flushing, Queens, N.Y., a department store credit authorizer.

The prosecutor said Gottfried, who filled out the forms, got $200 to $400 per customer, with the rest going to Miller.

The pair, he said, had netted up to $80,000 since 1963.

In Cleveland, Special FBI agent Earl E. Brown said two National Guardmen — Frank M. Kovach Jr., 22 of Parma, Ohio, and Donald Taylor, 29, of Cleveland, charged up to $600 to forward papers to draft boards showing that the men had enlisted in the Guard.

Kovach and Taylor were accused of aiding and abetting draft evasion.

The raids came on a day when the Defense Department issued a call for a draft of 34,600 men in May, the most since January.

Deering Boy Dies In Blast

DEERING, Mo. (AP)—A 17-year-old boy died today of injuries apparently received while dynamiting stumps on a farm near Deering Tuesday.

Scott Pacifico of Deering died in a Hayti hospital. A man working with Scott, H. G. Mansfield, 61, of Deering, was reported in critical condition at the hospital.

The sheriff's office said the youth's uncle, J. B. McDonald, said he found his nephew and Mansfield lying on the ground near a dynamited stump in the field.

Credit Curb Voted for LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking and Currency Committee today voted to give President Johnson authority to control installment buying as a means of combating inflation.

The action, taken virtually unanimously, would restore powers used during the Korean War to fix the size of down payments and the length of time for repayment of installment purchases.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., who offered the amendment, said he checked with the White House before doing so and was told there was no objection to the committee action.

The amendment was offered to a bill extending for two years the Defense Production Act, which authorizes a series of government actions designed to insure smooth operating of the economy during emergencies.

Lady Bird's Throat Better

Spradling Urges Funds for Hospital

JEFFERSON CITY -- State Sen. A. M. Spradling Jr., of Cape Girardeau has gone to bat for Hill-Burton funds for the Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston.

He recently wrote Austin Hill, chairman of the hospital advisory council, about the urgent need of additional facilities at the hospital. A copy was mailed to Charles L. Blanton, Jr., Sikeston publisher.

The letter read:

"It is my understanding that the Hospital Advisory Council will meet in the near future in order to distribute Hill-Burton aid throughout the State of Missouri. As you know, Sikeston, Missouri, has an application presently pending for Hill-Burton aid and this city is in my senatorial district.

"There is an extremely urgent need for hospital beds in the Sikeston hospital. I am sure that your Council has been advised of the conditions but I did once more desire to point out to you that there are patients in the halls in all wings of both floors of the hospital; that a friend of mine recently needed a physical examination and had to wait four days for a hospital bed in Sikeston. This particular hospital serves not only Scott County, but also Mississippi and New Madrid Counties. I sincerely hope that the Council will give every consideration to extending Hill-Burton aid to the Sikeston Hoscil that the money spent there will help to take care of one of the most urgent needs for hospital beds in the State of Missouri.

"I am sending you additional copies of this letter so that you might be able to distribute them to each member of the Council and if I can be of further assistance to the Council in explaining the extremely urgent nature of the Sikeston appeal, I shall be most happy to appear before the Council or to obtain for them any information available. Your consideration will be gratefully appreciated by the people of Scott County, as well as those other people in the counties served by this fine hospital. Needless to say, with Medicare becoming effective July 1, there is going to be an even greater need in this area for hospital beds.

"The people of the Sikeston community have contributed heavily toward their portion of the needed funds and I sincerely hope that the Missouri Hospital Advisory Council will recognize the local effort and the fact that the help they will be giving will be greatly appreciated."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Wednesday, March 30, 1699, Paris, France: Haroldette DuBunny appears in false wrists.

The name of Sikeston's hospital -- The Missouri Delta Community Hospital -- undoubtedly was considered a masterpiece originally.

Today it is a monstrosity -- the name, that is.

Few people in conversation put all the words in. One or more of the words of the title usually are omitted.

It is a difficult name to remember although it is true that every one of the words in the title accurately describes it. It is a regional Missouri hospital serving the delta community.

Unfortunately as a title it is a mouth full and then some and difficult to remember.

If the hospital's name could be shortened by one word it would help or if it could simply be titled Delta hospital or Community hospital it would be called more often by its right name than by "Sikeston" hospital or by some arbitrary individual choice of words by which the title is shortened to spare the breath and not tax the memory.

Shortening the name might be complicated.

It shouldn't be undertaken if the hospital would lose Hill-Burton funds or other federal aid.

Surely it could be accomplished as a long range goal.

It may save a life some day.

Picking up an injured person or a heart victim and expecting him to say "The Missouri Delta Community Hospital, please" is asking far too much.

He might die before he gets the string of words out of his mouth.

SUCH LOGIC!

No gain ever comes without some loss. If someone were to discover a cure for cancer, heart trouble or any other of the dread ailments that afflict mankind, certain individuals would be hurt. Think of the millions of dollars lost to drug houses that manufacture the drugs used for treatment, the sales lost to pharmacists, the business lost to doctors.

Did you ever hear a single voice of protest at the never-ending quest for cures for such diseases? And who would heed, regardless of protest?

Yet today we have a cure for the cancer that destroys beauty along Missouri's highways--beauty that attracts how many tourists traveling how many millions of miles spending how many millions of dollars a year?--and the very mention of treatment wrings bitter cries of agony from a relatively few persons who might lose some business as a result.

The billboard industry put its case before Missouri's lawmakers, Monday--and a tragic, sorry case they made it out to be.

One Eldon restaurateur told the hearing that removal of billboards would cost Missouri $90,000 annually in sales tax from his business alone. Try a little salt--quite a little--before swallowing that. Or try these facts for seasoning: A $90,000 sales tax loss at 3 percent would represent a $3 million gross in lost business each year for this one man's chain of restaurants! That's nearly $10,000 daily--and not the entire business, just business he would lose. (he says!)

Gulped that down? Well, gulp down the other claims with the same salt of reasoning.

Those tourists coming to Missouri must be fed, housed and amused--the same amount of food, housing and amusement either way--whether we have billboards to irritate them or beautiful scenery to entice and enchant them. If billboard advertising is denied to one business, just as surely will it be denied to all that businessman's competitors, putting them all on equal footing with no lessened demand.

There is nothing in the law that says the state cannot have information centers, rest areas, where information regarding food, lodging and amusement and sightseeing can be modestly placed for the visitors' information. Since the tourist must eat and sleep, and since recreation is his primary aim, it stands to reason he will seek such information about the places he intends to visit as well as stops along the way.

Of course there will be some businesses hurt. There were businesses hurt when the automobile displaced the horse and buggy, when radio and television moved into the American scene. That's regrettable, but it's also unavoidable.

Other states have cleared up their billboard mess, still others will in order to win the federal premiums it will bring.

Missouri is building for a tourist future--sees a potentially vast expansion in what is already a much bigger business than the billboard business. We don't want to lose any of that business, and we don't want to cripple its growth. That doesn't leave the billboard interests a dollar sign to stand on in their purported logic.

More than that, they don't have a moral leg for support either--not in the face of more and more research and trials to prove that billboards actually cost human lives on the highways.

Then, of course, while it may be old fashioned, we still have a profound belief in the rights of the people, and given a vote, Missourians would have banished billboards long ago.

SEAT BELTS ARE THE LATEST STYLE--FOR SAFETY, SECURITY, DRIVING COMFORT

"They get dirty and rub off on my clothes."

"They're tricky to unfasten."

"They're restricting."

If, like other women, you've had these concerns about seat belts, you can forget them. Good seat belts, properly installed, are easy to operate, unnoticeable to wear, and simple to take care of.

"Properly installed" means that a seat belt, like a dress or suit, needs to be fitted to the driver or passenger who will use it most. A belt that's well positioned and adjusted rests on the hip bones--not across the abdomen--and pulls downward at about a 45-degree angle. It fits snugly but not so tightly that it binds you or puts permanent creases in your clothing.

Good belts can be installed at your service station or auto-accessory store. Many oil stations will mount seat belts to meet all required construction specifications--in minutes.

Belts should be installed with the buckle sides toward the center of the car. The moment you get yours is the time to practice exits and entrances. Pulling the belt buckle the right way to release it will quickly become a reflex action.

The better seat belts have link closures that snap shut or release instantly. On the average, it takes five seconds at most to fasten or unfasten this kind of belt. (A driver in and out of her car 18 times during the day would spend a total of only three minutes manipulating her seat belt.)

As for the dirt factor--you can clean most seat belts as easily as you dust the dashboard. They can be detached and machine washed, although it's better to launder them right in the car, using detergent-water or a good foam upholstery cleaner. Lay them out on a clean cloth so the wet webbing doesn't bleed on the upholstery or seat covers. Be sure, too, that the belts aren't used again until they're absolutely dry.

Most women find that seat belts are relaxing not restricting. They improve posture, preventing slumping and the tiredness that goes with it. In the driver's seat, good posture is synonymous with better visibility and better control of the wheel and the pedals.

If ever you've driven so long you feel restricted--an arm gets numb or a foot starts tingling--it definitely is time to get out of your seat belt--and out of the car. No matter how professional your seat belt is or how well it's mounted, it can keep you safe only when you take other precautions, too: relaxing your muscles and resting your eyes regularly on trips, never driving when you're tired, driving defensively (anticipating what other drivers and even pedestrians will do), and always having your car in top running condition.

RESEARCH

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was editor of a small Missouri paper. One day he received a letter from a subscriber, stating that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck.

Twain replied: "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good luck or bad. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to the store, spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever after.

WHEN WE TAKE IN EACH OTHER'S WASHING

Utopia Will Have Arrived

Let's tax the whole country so New Yorkers won't have to pay as much as the true cost of their train rides. Let's all pay more for our breakfast coffee so the rich planters of South America will stay rich and won't have to pay the taxes you pay. Let's continue to forgive France the 4 billion dollars we lent them almost 50 years ago (plus the billions we have given them since) so they can drain away our gold. Let's all continue to pay more for gasoline taxes to build superhighways for states who refuse to build their own. Let's all keep on paying more food than it costs to raise it, so some farmers can be paid billions they don't earn. Let's continue to pay billions to "veterans" who never saw a battle. Let's keep on paying more for our homes so building trades unionists can continue to get as much as $30 for a 6 hour day.

Who's kidding whom?

If we all did our own work, paid our own bills instead of insisting others pay them, we'd get more done, and save the billions of dollars every year in handling charges--charges that have so boosted our debt that interest alone is more than 11 billion dollars a year.

Sharing the wealth (i.e., socialism) is nothing but sharing the poverty, and don't let any politician steal your vote by telling you differently.

THE RULE OF LAW

"Can a disorderly society survive?" That question is asked in an article by former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Whittaker which originally appeared in the Kansas City Star and has been reprinted by the Reader's Digest in condensed form.

His answer: "In all recorded history, none ever has. On the contrary, history shows that the first evidences of each society's decay appeared in the toleration of disobedience of its laws."

Justice Whittaker relates this historical fact to the attitude of certain groups within this country which hold that they have the right to violate laws they consider bad. Of this, he says: "The great pity here is that these minority groups are actually eroding and destroying the legal processes which alone can ever assure to them, or permanently maintain for them, due process and equal protection of the laws, and that can, thus, protect them from discriminations and abuses by majorities."

There can be no true freedom without the rule of law. Anyone has the right to protest any law and urge its repeal or change. But no one has the right to disobey laws which he simply doesn't like.

H. L. Hunt Says

THE CONFUSION MAKERS

If we discuss public affairs of the state of the country very often, especially with persons who are or pretend to be satisfied with conditions as they are, we have all met one particular argument. When we advance what seems to be a sensible and constructive proposal for improvement, especially in the direction of more individual liberty, we are told: "That can't be done any more. Our society has become too complex."

It certainly is obvious that a great deal more and different things are being done today than a hundred years ago. We have grown and diversified in every sense of those words. The picture of our society and economy as a whole has become more complicated and harder for some to understand. This is doubtless why so many wrong and unreasonable solutions to our problems are being offered.

But reason and common sense haven't become "more complex," because they are the same as they always were. Basic principles have not changed. Profit still encourages production. Punishment still deters crime. These and other statements about men remain true because human nature does not change.

What has changed, along with growth and diversification in our economy, has been the amount of confusion and irrationality in our thinking. A certain type of mind today seems to thrive on confusion and often to create it deliberately. It is the one which popularizes the argument that a "complex society" has made common sense obsolete. All the great discoveries made by the mind of man have seemed very simple, once known. None have been the product of the confusion makers. HLH

NEW YORK AP -- All of his life, Kirk Douglas has believed in the cult of the champion, whose only success lies in constant victory.

Lately, however, the actor confesses to having some second thoughts.

"Something happens in this quest for success. Sometimes you can lose yourself along the way," he said.

"I'd like to be able to afford the luxury of failure. You have to feel free to do what you want to do, although this is hard to attain in any field.

"But I feel most people can come pretty close to getting what they want out of life--if they are really ready to pay the price."

After acting in some 40 pictures Kirk would like to gamble, win or lose, on becoming a screen and Broadway director.

The drive to win has been a part of his nature ever since, as the son of immigrant parents from Russia, he worked his way through college.

He became a top debater, president of the student body, and a champion intercollegiate wrestler.

After slinging hash part-time here and appearing in several Broadway plays, he did a wartime Navy hitch, then went to Hollywood and quickly became a star.

"To me, New York is the greatest city in the world because it has a kind of frightening power, an indifference to everybody except the winner that makes it awesome," Kirk said. "From my youth I also remember the throb of it, your ability to get lost in it."

Kirk also remembers as a chief turning point in his life an English class taught by Louise Livingstone at the high school in Amsterdam, N. Y.

"She convinced me I should get an education," he said.

Here are a few of the things Kirk Douglas likes:

"Excellence, the ballet grace of pro athletes, being alone and surrounded by music, peasant food of almost any country but particularly plain spaghetti with butter; yellow, because it's supposed to be the color of friendship; contrasts, such as sunny and rainy days; big storms, because they make me think there's somebody up there really running things; the feeling of cleanliness, walking at night, swimming, hitting a long ball off the tee, reaching for something out of reach, seeing the American flag wave in a breeze."

These are his dislikes:

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- "Everybody's doing it" used to be the name of a ragtime tune referring to a popular dance, "The Turkey Trot." Today it refers to the "Gum-Shoe Trot."

Everybody's dancing this dance today. General Motors is gum-shoeing its chief critic, Ralph Nader. The state department is gum-shoeing the grandson of a former secretary of state. Miss Frances Knight, chief of the passport division, who signed this order, says that her boss in the state department is gum-shoeing on her.

Congressman Irving Whalley, the Pennsylvania Republican, wants the FBI to gum-shoe on me for telling how he sent Teakwood elephants to Republicans which he said were purchased in India, when he really got them from a Republican committee bargain sale in Washington.

The justice department is gum-shoeing Jack Anderson and me for allegedly stealing documents from Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn.

Sen. Dodd, in turn, has retained a private detective, with the reported cooperation of U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Irving Kaufman of New York, to gum-shoe on us.

A BATH IN NORTH CAROLINA

And the other day I got a phone call from two friends in Reidsville, N. C., that an agent friendly to Sen. Dodd had called to gum-shoe on a bathing incident in 1915 when I was arrested at 3 a.m. for taking a sponge bath near the Southern Railway yards after working all night striking a Chautauqua tent.

It's an incident I have written about several times and has become quite a joke in North Carolina. I was even invited back to Reidsville by the Chamber of Commerce to celebrate the occasion.

Nevertheless, C. L. Oliver, publisher of the Reidsville Review, was cross-examined by a friend of Sen. Dodd's as to where he could get a copy of a 1915 newspaper describing the incident. Unfortunately they had been destroyed in a fire a long time ago. Then Mr. Oliver assured the Dodd agent, however, that the newspaper, if available would have clearly showed I was acquitted, and that there was nothing sinister about the arrest and trial.

T. W. Gladewell, son of the attorney who volunteered to defend me in court on that misty morning 51 years ago, was also queried by a Dodd agent and gave the same assurances.

SHADOWING A PRIVATE EYE

Meanwhile, since everybody else was doing it, Jack Anderson decided to do some gum-shoeing ourselves on the private eye sent from New York to shadow us.

He is James A. Lynch, of 3005 Johnson Place, Wantagh, Long Island, a big man in his late forties with reddish hair and ample girth whom Jack found to have registered at the Fairfax Hotel and next day reported to Senator Dodd.

Detective Lynch used Dodd's office as a base of operation and began interviewing witnesses. Some of them complained that he had passed himself off as a federal agent, others that he had threatened them, that he said he was working for Judge Irving Kaufman of the U. S. Court of Appeals; and had warned one witness that Sen. Dodd would get him fired if he didn't cooperate.

GRILLING A PRIVATE EYE

After some preliminary investigation of Dodd's investigator, Anderson telephoned the investigator direct. He first told Lynch that he had been accused of impersonating an FBI agent. This Lynch denied, saying he had always identified himself as a private detective before talking to anyone.

Lynch also denied that he had threatened anyone or told one witness Dodd would have him fired.

"How is it," asked Anderson, "that three witnesses tell a different story?"

Lynch offered no explanation.

"Isn't it true that you used Judge Kaufman's name in approaching these witnesses?" Anderson asked.

"No," replied Lynch.

"Well these witnesses had never heard of Judge Kaufman until you brought up his name. How do you think they got the name? Do you think they made it up out of the blue?"

"I may have mentioned Judge Kaufman's name," Lynch admitted.

Judge Kaufman is a close friend of Dodd's. Incidentally he once asked me to help him get appointed to the U. S. District Court in New York.

"What are you doing here?" Anderson asked Lynch. "Are you trying to intimidate the witnesses against Dodd?"

"I don't intend to tell you," replied Lynch.

Thus goes the gum-shoe dance of "Everybody's Doing It" in Washington. Most interesting phase of the dance is the justice department's investigation of Anderson and me which will be described in an early column.

Multi-Million Dollar Flow of U.S. Goods into Viet Nam Went Unaudited Despite Heavy Pilferage by Black Marketeers There

Washington, D.C.: -- Four ace longshoremen, who can unsnarl and outsnarl anything and anybody when need be, have been in Saigon for three months trying to unchoke that port of entry for soldiers, guns and good.

Now they are looking homeward. They want out, though they pledged themselves to stay for at least six months.

It is not the heat. It's the heat they just could not generate to move the Vietnamese portside bureaucracy, to melt the glut, to unravel the red tape, to wipe out tens of millions of dollars' worth of black market pilferage.

They are saying to their longshoremen's union, which dispatched them there: One does not have to be a hawk or a dove to loathe vultures.

Word of their sentiment, and reports from National Maritime Union (NMU) vice president Mel Barisic that some 40 per cent of American AID cargo is speeding into the Viet Nam black market, has angered some probe-minded congressmen.

It should. If the labor leaders' estimates are correct -- and they know a dock problem when they smell one from near or far -- at least $120 million of some $300 million worth of aid is being stolen.

One investigator, whose men have interviewed the New York longshoremen and maritime union leaders, was aghast over the discovery that the General Accounting Office (GAO) of our government has not had a "physical presence" in Viet Nam in almost three years!

Yet almost one billion dollars' worth of civilian aid has been shipped over.

The congressional probers are led by Rep. John Moss, who has had long conferences with the GAO directors. It is their job to make certain that every federal dollar spent gets audited.

Actually, the billion dollars which have gone to Viet Nam have gotten only a light once-over. No "Inspector General" of AID, which authorizes the shipments, has been in Viet Nam "in 15 months," Congressman Moss told this columnist.

"There literally has been no physical presence of GAO in Viet Nam for almost three years," Mr. Moss said. "There has been no office. A team has just gone over in the last few weeks."

Moss disclosed that the GAO and the AID people told him that they have had difficulty in finding personnel sufficiently trained to audit the vast quantities of civilian goods in that war-ripped country. Moss' retort was that there were undoubtedly hundreds of soldiers who could handle such books.

There will be a permanent General Accounting Office headquarters in Saigon from now on, Mr. Moss was assured. But he and some of his colleagues want to see for themselves what's happening to the huge tonnage of costly civilian goods.

The special congressional squad will fly to Viet Nam shortly to ask why the U.S. is fighting on two fronts -- the military and the black market.

Who sells us short? Who are the black marketeers? Why is there no commodity control system?

Why have the Vietnamese port authorities procrastinated over the International Longshoremen's Assn.'s specialists' proposals for the central registration and identification of Vietnamese dockwallopers? Are Vietnamese lower echelon officials getting paid off?

There certainly is a congressional storm brewing.

Congressman Paul Fino writes, "You are correct in saying that our Vietnamese allies are ridden with graft and corruption. Black market dollars are bankrolling the Viet Cong."

Senators have heard that, despite reports of speedier unloading in Saigon and other Viet Nam ports, there still are scores of ships so backlogged through inefficient and sometimes deliberately stalled unloading by local workers that the U.S. is losing $1 million daily in stalled vessels.

There will be louder protests from inside labor, too. NMU Leader Joe Curran, his executive assistant William Perry and Vice President Mel Barisic are flying over to see what can be done for their hundreds of seamen immobilized aboard the idle ships awaiting a turn at a harbor berth.

When all the grim reports are in, the noise will be sufficiently loud to drown out the roar of guns over there. Perhaps then some of those in Saigon will realize that some of us here know there is a war on.

The name of Sikeston's hospital -- The Missouri Delta Community Hospital -- undoubtedly was considered a masterpiece originally.

Today it is a monstrosity -- the name, that is.

Few people in conversation put all the words in. One or more of the words of the title usually are omitted.

It is a difficult name to remember although it is true that every one of the words in the title accurately describes it. It is a regional Missouri hospital serving the delta community.

Unfortunately as a title it is a mouth full and then some and difficult to remember.

If the hospital's name could be shortened by one word it would help or if it could simply be titled Delta hospital or Community hospital it would be called more often by its right name than by "Sikeston" hospital or by some arbitrary individual choice of words by which the title is shortened to spare the breath and not tax the memory.

Shortening the name might be complicated.

It shouldn't be undertaken if the hospital would lose Hill-Burton funds or other federal aid.

Surely it could be accomplished as a long range goal.

It may save a life some day.

Picking up an injured person or a heart victim and expecting him to say "The Missouri Delta Community Hospital, please" is asking far too much.

He might die before he gets the string of words out of his mouth.

SUCH LOGIC!

No gain ever comes without some loss. If someone were to discover a cure for cancer, heart trouble or any other of the dread ailments that afflict mankind, certain individuals would be hurt. Think of the millions of dollars lost to drug houses that manufacture the drugs used for treatment, the sales lost to pharmacists, the business lost to doctors.

Did you ever hear a single voice of protest at the never-ending quest for cures for such diseases? And who would heed, regardless of protest?

Yet today we have a cure for the cancer that destroys beauty along Missouri's highways--beauty that attracts how many tourists traveling how many millions of miles spending how many millions of dollars a year?--and the very mention of treatment wrings bitter cries of agony from a relatively few persons who might lose some business as a result.

The billboard industry put its case before Missouri's lawmakers, Monday--and a tragic, sorry case they made it out to be.

One Eldon restaurateur told the hearing that removal of billboards would cost Missouri $90,000 annually in sales tax from his business alone. Try a little salt--quite a little--before swallowing that. Or try these facts for seasoning: A $90,000 sales tax loss at 3 percent would represent a $3 million gross in lost business each year for this one man's chain of restaurants! That's nearly $10,000 daily--and not the entire business, just business he would lose. (he says!)

Gulped that down? Well, gulp down the other claims with the same salt of reasoning.

Those tourists coming to Missouri must be fed, housed and amused--the same amount of food, housing and amusement either way--whether we have billboards to irritate them or beautiful scenery to entice and enchant them. If billboard advertising is denied to one business, just as surely will it be denied to all that businessman's competitors, putting them all on equal footing with no lessened demand.

There is nothing in the law that says the state cannot have information centers, rest areas, where information regarding food, lodging and amusement and sightseeing can be modestly placed for the visitors' information. Since the tourist must eat and sleep, and since recreation is his primary aim, it stands to reason he will seek such information about the places he intends to visit as well as stops along the way.

Of course there will be some businesses hurt. There were businesses hurt when the automobile displaced the horse and buggy, when radio and television moved into the American scene. That's regrettable, but it's also unavoidable.

Other states have cleared up their billboard mess, still others will in order to win the federal premiums it will bring.

Missouri is building for a tourist future--sees a potentially vast expansion in what is already a much bigger business than the billboard business. We don't want to lose any of that business, and we don't want to cripple its growth. That doesn't leave the billboard interests a dollar sign to stand on in their purported logic.

More than that, they don't have a moral leg for support either--not in the face of more and more research and trials to prove that billboards actually cost human lives on the highways.

Then, of course, while it may be old fashioned, we still have a profound belief in the rights of the people, and given a vote, Missourians would have banished billboards long ago.

SEAT BELTS ARE THE LATEST STYLE--FOR SAFETY, SECURITY, DRIVING COMFORT

"They get dirty and rub off on my clothes."

"They're tricky to unfasten."

"They're restricting."

If, like other women, you've had these concerns about seat belts, you can forget them. Good seat belts, properly installed, are easy to operate, unnoticeable to wear, and simple to take care of.

"Properly installed" means that a seat belt, like a dress or suit, needs to be fitted to the driver or passenger who will use it most. A belt that's well positioned and adjusted rests on the hip bones--not across the abdomen--and pulls downward at about a 45-degree angle. It fits snugly but not so tightly that it binds you or puts permanent creases in your clothing.

Good belts can be installed at your service station or auto-accessory store. Many oil stations will mount seat belts to meet all required construction specifications--in minutes.

Belts should be installed with the buckle sides toward the center of the car. The moment you get yours is the time to practice exits and entrances. Pulling the belt buckle the right way to release it will quickly become a reflex action.

The better seat belts have link closures that snap shut or release instantly. On the average, it takes five seconds at most to fasten or unfasten this kind of belt. (A driver in and out of her car 18 times during the day would spend a total of only three minutes manipulating her seat belt.)

As for the dirt factor--you can clean most seat belts as easily as you dust the dashboard. They can be detached and machine washed, although it's better to launder them right in the car, using detergent-water or a good foam upholstery cleaner. Lay them out on a clean cloth so the wet webbing doesn't bleed on the upholstery or seat covers. Be sure, too, that the belts aren't used again until they're absolutely dry.

Most women find that seat belts are relaxing not restricting. They improve posture, preventing slumping and the tiredness that goes with it. In the driver's seat, good posture is synonymous with better visibility and better control of the wheel and the pedals.

If ever you've driven so long you feel restricted--an arm gets numb or a foot starts tingling--it definitely is time to get out of your seat belt--and out of the car. No matter how professional your seat belt is or how well it's mounted, it can keep you safe only when you take other precautions, too: relaxing your muscles and resting your eyes regularly on trips, never driving when you're tired, driving defensively (anticipating what other drivers and even pedestrians will do), and always having your car in top running condition.

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was editor of a small Missouri paper. One day he received a letter from a subscriber, stating that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck.

Twain replied: "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good luck or bad. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to the store, spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever after.

The biggest change in food retailing has been the rise of supermarkets. Today, supermarkets account for 12 percent of all stores, and do three-fourths of the grocery business. In 1948, only 2 percent of the grocery stores were supermarkets, yet even then they accounted for 26 percent of sales.

WHEN WE TAKE IN EACH OTHER'S WASHING

Utopia Will Have Arrived

Let's tax the whole country so New Yorkers won't have to pay as much as the true cost of their train rides. Let's all pay more for our breakfast coffee so the rich planters of South America will stay rich and won't have to pay the taxes you pay. Let's continue to forgive France the 4 billion dollars we lent them almost 50 years ago (plus the billions we have given them since) so they can drain away our gold. Let's all continue to pay more for gasoline taxes to build superhighways for states who refuse to build their own. Let's all keep on paying more food than it costs to raise it, so some farmers can be paid billions they don't earn. Let's continue to pay billions to "veterans" who never saw a battle. Let's keep on paying more for our homes so building trades unionists can continue to get as much as $30 for a 6 hour day.

Who's kidding whom?

If we all did our own work, paid our own bills instead of insisting others pay them, we'd get more done, and save the billions of dollars every year in handling charges--charges that have so boosted our debt that interest alone is more than 11 billion dollars a year.

Sharing the wealth (i.e., socialism) is nothing but sharing the poverty, and don't let any politician steal your vote by telling you differently.

THE RULE OF LAW

"Can a disorderly society survive?" That question is asked in an article by former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Whittaker which originally appeared in the Kansas City Star and has been reprinted by the Reader's Digest in condensed form.

His answer: "In all recorded history, none ever has. On the contrary, history shows that the first evidences of each society's decay appeared in the toleration of disobedience of its laws."

Justice Whittaker relates this historical fact to the attitude of certain groups within this country which hold that they have the right to violate laws they consider bad. Of this, he says: "The great pity here is that these minority groups are actually eroding and destroying the legal processes which alone can ever assure to them, or permanently maintain for them, due process and equal protection of the laws, and that can, thus, protect them from discriminations and abuses by majorities."

There can be no true freedom without the rule of law. Anyone has the right to protest any law and urge its repeal or change. But no one has the right to disobey laws which he simply doesn't like.

H. L. Hunt Says

THE CONFUSION MAKERS

If we discuss public affairs of the state of the country very often, especially with persons who are or pretend to be satisfied with conditions as they are, we have all met one particular argument. When we advance what seems to be a sensible and constructive proposal for improvement, especially in the direction of more individual liberty, we are told: "That can't be done any more. Our society has become too complex."

It certainly is obvious that a great deal more and different things are being done today than a hundred years ago. We have grown and diversified in every sense of those words. The picture of our society and economy as a whole has become more complicated and harder for some to understand. This is doubtless why so many wrong and unreasonable solutions to our problems are being offered.

But reason and common sense haven't become "more complex," because they are the same as they always were. Basic principles have not changed. Profit still encourages production. Punishment still deters crime. These and other statements about men remain true because human nature does not change.

What has changed, along with growth and diversification in our economy, has been the amount of confusion and irrationality in our thinking. A certain type of mind today seems to thrive on confusion and often to create it deliberately. It is the one which popularizes the argument that a "complex society" has made common sense obsolete. All the great discoveries made by the mind of man have seemed very simple, once known. None have been the product of the confusion makers. HLH

NEW YORK AP -- All of his life, Kirk Douglas has believed in the cult of the champion, whose only success lies in constant victory.

Lately, however, the actor confesses to having some second thoughts.

"Something happens in this quest for success. Sometimes you can lose yourself along the way," he said.

"I'd like to be able to afford the luxury of failure. You have to feel free to do what you want to do, although this is hard to attain in any field.

"But I feel most people can come pretty close to getting what they want out of life--if they are really ready to pay the price."

After acting in some 40 pictures Kirk would like to gamble, win or lose, on becoming a screen and Broadway director.

The drive to win has been a part of his nature ever since, as the son of immigrant parents from Russia, he worked his way through college.

He became a top debater, president of the student body, and a champion intercollegiate wrestler.

After slinging hash part-time here and appearing in several Broadway plays, he did a wartime Navy hitch, then went to Hollywood and quickly became a star.

"To me, New York is the greatest city in the world because it has a kind of frightening power, an indifference to everybody except the winner that makes it awesome," Kirk said. "From my youth I also remember the throb of it, your ability to get lost in it."

Kirk also remembers as a chief turning point in his life an English class taught by Louise Livingstone at the high school in Amsterdam, N. Y.

"She convinced me I should get an education," he said.

Here are a few of the things Kirk Douglas likes:

"Excellence, the ballet grace of pro athletes, being alone and surrounded by music, peasant food of almost any country but particularly plain spaghetti with butter; yellow, because it's supposed to be the color of friendship; contrasts, such as sunny and rainy days; big storms, because they make me think there's somebody up there really running things; the feeling of cleanliness, walking at night, swimming, hitting a long ball off the tee, reaching for something out of reach, seeing the American flag wave in a breeze."

These are his dislikes:

"Mediocrity in myself or anybody else, the taste of turnips; exercise, which I do as a form of penance; critics, because they can make me feel so good or so lousy; shopping, double-breasted suits, pompous people, and those who think patriotism is corny.

"I also hate doing homework for my kids. To me, making a new movie is easier than solving problems in the new math. There life has rumbled on by me."

Actually, the billion dollars which have gone to Viet Nam have gotten only a light once-over. No "Inspector General" of AID, which authorizes the shipments, has been in Viet Nam "in 15 months," Congressman Moss told this columnist.

"There literally has been no physical presence of GAO in Viet Nam for almost three years," Mr. Moss said. "There has been no office. A team has just gone over in the last few weeks."

Moss disclosed that the GAO and the AID people told him that they have had difficulty in finding personnel sufficiently trained to audit the vast quantities of civilian goods in that war-ripped country. Moss' retort was that there were undoubtedly hundreds of soldiers who could handle such books.

There will be a permanent General Accounting Office headquarters in Saigon from now on, Mr. Moss was assured. But he and some of his colleagues want to see for themselves what's happening to the huge tonnage of costly civilian goods.

The special congressional squad will fly to Viet Nam shortly to ask why the U.S. is fighting on two fronts -- the military and the black market.

Who sells us short? Who are the black marketeers? Why is there no commodity control system?

Why have the Vietnamese port authorities procrastinated over the International Longshoremen's Assn.'s specialists' proposals for the central registration and identification of Vietnamese dockwallopers? Are Vietnamese lower echelon officials getting paid off?

There certainly is a congressional storm brewing.

Congressman Paul Fino writes, "You are correct in saying that our Vietnamese allies are ridden with graft and corruption. Black market dollars are bankrolling the Viet Cong."

Senators have heard that, despite reports of speedier unloading in Saigon and other Viet Nam ports, there still are scores of ships so backlogged through inefficient and sometimes deliberately stalled unloading by local workers that the U.S. is losing $1 million daily in stalled vessels.

There will be louder protests from inside labor, too. NMU Leader Joe Curran, his executive assistant William Perry and Vice President Mel Barisic are flying over to see what can be done for their hundreds of seamen immobilized aboard the idle ships awaiting a turn at a harbor berth.

When all the grim reports are in, the noise will be sufficiently loud to drown out the roar of guns over there. Perhaps then some of those in Saigon will realize that some of us here know there is a war on.

Nina Gale Herring Is Bride Of Lt. Thomas F. Miller

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. -- All Saints Protestant Chapel was the setting at 3 p.m. March 20 for the wedding of Miss Nina Gale Herring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Herring, Tallahassee, Fla., to Lt. Thomas Farris Miller, NAS, Cecil Field, Fla., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Miller, Sr., of Benton, Mo.

Chaplain William Smith read the vows of the double ring ceremony before a background of altar vases filled with white gladioli and pompom mums and standing baskets holding white gladioli and mums.

John Nill of Jacksonville was the vocalist accompanied by Mrs. John Silcox of Jacksonville, organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white peau de soie sheath with a scoop neck and long sleeves. Calla lily appliques with seed pearls adorned the front of the gown. The dress featured a circular chapel train. Her headpiece was a crown of seed pearls securing a two tier illusion veil. Her bouquet was a cascade arrangement of white French carnations centered with Cattleya orchids.

The maid of honor was Miss Amanda Sue Herring of Jacksonville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Mrs. C. Raymond Conway of Jacksonville, Miss Wanda Elaine Herring and Mrs. Clyde R. Gaskins, both of Tallahassee, all sisters of the bride.

The attendants wore floor-length gowns of taffeta. The skirts were overlaid with yellow organza and the bodices were overlaid with white Schiffli embroidered organza with matching rose appliques. The bodices featured flounce sleeves and scoop necklines. Bands of moss velvet ribbon encircled the empire waistlines and sleeves. They wore headpieces of two yellow roses securing two tier veils of illusion. The attendants carried cascade arrangements of ivy and yellow ribbon.

Lt. A. Norman Gandia, Blue Angels, NAS, Pensacola, Fla., was best man. Groomsmen were Lt. William F. Wapples and Lt. D. Sibold, both of NAS, Jacksonville, and Lt. John M. Kilpatrick, NAS, Mirmar, Calif.

The reception was held at the Officer's Club, NAS, Jacksonville. The centerpiece decoration was white French feathered carnations. Miss Janice Garrett, Mrs. Hazen Sadler, both of Jacksonville and Mrs. Jacqueline Stahl of Tallahassee, served.

Miss Barbara Mendleson of Tallahassee was in charge of the guest book.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Ocho Rios, Jamaica. They are now at home at 6455 San Juan Ave., Casa Grande Apts., Jacksonville.

Mrs. Miller is a graduate of Florida State University and is a teacher with the Duval County Board of Public Instruction.

Lt. Miller is a graduate of Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau, Mo., and is a Navy aviator.

Bulldog Trackmen Fall To Cape Central In First Meet

The Sikeston Bulldogs track team lost out to Cape Central in a duel meet at Cape yesterday afternoon. The final score was 103-28.

Sikeston won two events, the high jump and the 880 yard relay. The 880 yard relay was close, but Danny Lopp pulled out in front of Cape's Sylvester Johnson to win the race for Sikeston. The relay team was made up of Gary White, Roger Blackman, Terry Scudder, and Danny Lopp.

Roger Blackman won the high jump for Sikeston as he beat out Sylvester Johnson. Blackman and Johnson were the only two in competition after they cleared the 5'10" mark. The bar was then moved to an even six feet. Both boys failed to make it in their three attempts. Blackman was awarded the contest since Johnson had knocked off the bar on one of his tries for the 5'8" mark. Blackman, who is only 5'7" tall narrowly missed clearing six feet.

Some outstanding times were turned in by Cape Central. Robert Gerecke, a former Sikeston boy ran a 52.4 second quarter and a 10.3 second hundred yard dash. Besides these events Gerecke also won the 220 yard dash with a time of 23 seconds. Sylvester Johnson turned in a time of 14.8 seconds for the 120 yard high hurdles, and through the javelin 158 feet.

Though this was a loss for Sikeston, it is too early in the season to see how all the teams will shape up. With some more work, Sikeston's track team should have a good season. Danny Lopp and Gary White are good strong runners and Roger Blackman's high jumping could possibly lead the other area schools in that event.

The Bulldogs will host a Varsity and Jr. Varsity meet with Charleston Friday at 4:30.

Bloomfield Upsets Malden In First Round Game

ESSEX -- Tonight will round out the first round games of the tournament with Gray Ridge taking on the Sikeston Highway Department at 7 p.m. and the Sikeston Eldoradoes meeting Boley's at 8:15 p.m.

The last game of the evening Parma and Essex will square off in a second round game.

In last night's action New Madrid swept past Dexter 83-64, Morley defeated Sikeston Canvas factory 89-61, and Bloomfield eked past a cold shooting Malden team 99-93.

In the first game of the evening Linnes McFerren led his New Madrid team to a 45-26 first half lead with a total of 36 points while Benson tallied 17 for losing Dexter.

Morley with a fine second half surge swept the Sikeston Canvas factory 89-61. Abernathy led Morley with a 30 point effort and Brown paced the Sikeston team with 25 points.

Bloomfield pulled a mild upset against the Malden team which is composed mostly of coaches.

Bloomfield ran up an unbeatable 56-39 half time edge and kept the Malden second half surge in check for a 99-93 win.

NCAA Announces Scholarship Awards Today

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Winners of 10 postgraduate basketball scholarships were announced today by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The awards are part of an NCAA program which presents $1,000 grants to outstanding scholar-athletes in sports in sports in which the NCAA conducts national championships.

Among the winners are Dick Nemelka, a 6-foot guard who led Brigham Young to the National Invitation Tournament championship, and Chuck Gardner, a 6-7 center of the University of Colorado who compiled one of the best overall statistical records in Big Eight history despite a broken toe.

Other winners in the University Division are Charles McKenna of St. Joseph's, Dennis Pauling of Iowa and Peter Coker, North Carolina State.

College division winners are John Mazola, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Howard Pease, Bowdoin College; Hunter Rawlings, Haverford; Gordon Schloming, Pomona; and John Portland State.

Nemelka logged a 3.54 grade point average in psychology at Brigham Young. He was the smallest player on his team but posted a 57 per cent field goal accuracy.

Gardner played the last seven games of the season for Colorado with his foot in a cast after breaking a toe against Iowa State. He took league honors with 284 points, nosing out Walt Wesley of Kansas who had 283.

Rains Take Toll In Grape Fruit League Play, Five Games Rained Out

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rain wiped out five exhibition baseball games Tuesday but Ken McMullen brought a ray of sunshine through the clouds for Washington Manager Gil Hodges.

McMullen pounded two home runs and drove in five runs as the Senators whipped Kansas City 6-4 in a game called after eight innings because of rain.

Elsewhere, Minnesota blanked Los Angeles 2-0 in a rain - shortened, five-inning game, Pittsburgh shaded the Chicago White Sox 6-5, San Francisco downed California 2-1 and Chicago outlasted Cleveland 12-10.

The New York Mets-New York Yankee, Baltimore-Detroit, Boston - Houston, St. Louis-Cincinnati and Atlanta-Philadelphia games all were rained out.

McMullen, who was the Senators' regular third baseman last season after coming over from Los Angeles in the Frank Howard-Claude Osteen deal, continued to flash the muscle that made him a Senator favorite in 1965.

The husky infielder walloped 18 home runs last year, second on the club only to Howard's 21, and drove in 54 runs in 150 games.

Hodges, who had batted him in the No. 2 spot most of last year, dropped him to No. 6 Tuesday, hoping to capitalize on his RBI potential, and the move paid off handsomely.

McMullen connected with one man on in the fourth and then with two on in the eighth as the Senators, who had lost their first nine exhibitions, won their fifth straight.

The output hoisted McMullen's spring figures to six homers and 11 RBIs. He leads the club in both departments.

Ken Harrelson and Dick Green homered for Kansas City.

The Twins pushed across two unearned runs to beat the Dodgers in a rematch of last season's World Series opponents.

Harmon Killebrew started the Twins' rally with a fourth-inning single. He moved to second on a wild pitch and then scored on Peewee Oliver's boot of Earl Battey's bouncer. After Jerry Kindall signled Battey to second, Andy Kosco's pinch double brought him home with the second Minnesota run.

Annual Midwestern Track Caravan Starts Saturday

Associated Press Writer

The annual midwestern track caravan starts Saturday at the Texas Relays. If the Arkansas Relays is a barometer of things to come, Big Eight athletes should dominate the circuit.

Oklahoma State, Kansas State and Missouri were the big winners at Arkansas; but Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska are sure to pick up a few gold medals at Texas.

Texas is the first stop on the three-event circuit. The Kansas Relays will be April 21, 22, 23 and the Drake Relays on April 29 and 30.

While Big Eight schools have pretty well held their own at Texas in the past, this year the league seems a sure bet to increase its medal count.

Big Eight entries dominated the Arkansas Relays, capturing 12 gold medals in the 18 events.

Oklahoma State's crack two-mile relay team is aiming for a world record with anchorman Tom Von Ruden, a senior. Last year, Von Ruden, Jim Metcalf, Dave Perry sped the distance in 7:18.3, wiping out the record shared by Oregon State and Villanova.

Two members of the team—Von Ruden and Metcalf—teamed with Arnold Droke and Chris McCubbins to win at Arkansas in 7:38.6. Coach Ralph Higgins, however, still has John Perry around for duty in the two-mile relay.

Perry ran on the victorious OSU sprint medley squad at Arkansas, teaming with Metcalf, Ron Hester and Larry Linn. The winning time was 3:21.1, which broke the old Arkansas record of 3:23.8, set by Southern Illinois in 1963.

The Cowpokes also won the four-mile relay in a comparatively slow time of 17:29.8. But they did beat a strong Kansas State squad.

K-State took the mile relay in a record-equalling time of 3:12.9--and the 880-yard relay.

Kansas suffered a blow when sprinter Bob Hanson, a senior, hurt his right foot. Hanson will undergo an operation during the Easter spring vacation.

"This is a tough blow to us," Timmons said. "Even worse, it's a hard break for Bob."

The operation will probably end Hanson's track career.

John Lawson, Kansas captain and the NCAA cross - country champion, is recovering from a strained knee tendon. It's hoped he'll be ready by Saturday.

Kansas freshman Jim Ryun is also going to the Texas Relays. He will compete in the Jerry Thompson open mile.

Gardner also placed second in rebounding and field goal percentage and fourth in free throw percentage in the Big Eight.

He had time left to earn a 3.559 grade point average in mathematics. The maximum is 4.0.

Our Bourbon is as old as the Hills.

Back in 1879, William and Scipio Hill, a pair of Kentucky cousins, opened a distillery.

They made precious little of their Bourbon, but what they made came up precious good. Rich and full. And so incredibly smooth that the Hill cousins were able to sell their whiskey for three times the going price.

Today, Hill & Hill is still made the same old way. As patiently as the Hill cousins meant it to be.

So be thankful you can get your Bourbon straight from the Hills of Kentucky.

NBA PLAYOFFS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The outcome of Cincinnati's effort to eliminate the defending champion Boston Celtics from the National Basketball Association playoffs tonight rests heavily on a knee--Jerry Lucas' left one.

Lucas, whose scoring and rebounding are a key factor in Cincinnati's 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series, injured the knee in the Royals' 113-107 victory at Boston Sunday.

He has been taking whirlpool treatments and has had cortisone, but if the sore joint should affect his performance, especially in rebounding, it might give the Celtics the edge they need to force the series into a fifth game at Boston.

Injuries also will play a big role in tonight's Western Division semifianl at St. Louis.

The Hawks hold a 2-0 advantage over Baltimore after winning the first two games on the Bullets' home floor and, with Baltimore hobbled by injuries, they figure to end the series.

Clay Wins Decision Over Chuvalo In 15-Round Match

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

TORONTO (AP) — "I told you he'd be tougher than Sonny Liston, Floyd Patterson or Ernie Terrell. I hit him with seven or eight of my best punches but he didn't go down. If he had fought all his other opponents like he fought me he would have won them all."

Cassius Clay was generous in his praise of George Chuvalo after winning a unanimous decision over the Canadian Tuesday night in a 15-round "heavyweight showdown" match at Maple Leaf Gardens. Clay's world title was not at stake officially because he is not recognized by the World Boxing Association of which Ontario is a member.

"He's a tough body puncher," said Clay of the 7-1 underdog who never has been knocked off his feet in 48 pro fights. "This fight proves I can take a body punch."

The champ, dressed in a tuxedo, met newsmen at the Gardens shortly after the fight. He said he would have stopped the plodding but game Canadian if he had not been forced to interrupt his training while the fight was shifted from city to city and a new opponent was subbed for his original foe, Terrell, the WBA champ.

"With all the traveling I did, I didn't have a chance to work on the heavy bag. The hardest thing I punched since I beat Patterson was Chuvalo's head."

Chuvalo, who was given no chance to win, said he thought he could have beaten Clay if he had more time to train. The Toronto bully boy had to take the fight on short notice when Terrell pulled out.

"I thought it was a pretty close fight," he said. "He fought a good fight and so did I. I didn't know who won or lost. I thought I won eight rounds.

"With the proper time to train, I feel I could knock him out. . . I wouldn't say he's great. He's very quick but not an extremely hard puncher. His punches have a lot of snap but he's not a big banger. He didn't hurt me at any time."

Irv Ungerman, Chuvalo's manager, who never has lost a fight on his scorecard, said, "I felt we deserved the decision but we won't protest. We're all through protesting. From now on the only way we'll win is to see a man on the canvas. I want the press to realize that this was no 7-1 fight."

Theater-television of Tuesday night's Cassius Clay-George Chuvalo heavyweight title fight proved a resounding financial dud, as expected.

Less than 40 outlets in the United States and Canada carried the closed-circuit telecast of the Toronto bout and attendance was poor.

An Associated Press survey of 22 of the U.S. outlets showed a total attendance of 30,739 of a possible 90,375.

Ten Canadian sites reported 15,600 spectators out of a potential 43,300.

Ticket prices ranged from $1 to $7. Chances are the theater-TV outfit that handled the operation — Main Bout, Inc. — will gross around $110,000 from the telecast. That's a far cry from the millions anticipated and the millions realized from previous closed-circuit fight telecasts.

The fight, which was originally to have been between Clay and Ernie Terrell, was rejected by New York, Chicago and other points before it landed in Toronto. Then Terrell pulled out in a contract dispute.

Initially, the match expected to provide a theater-TV bonanza — perhaps even $3 million. But as the difficulties mounted the prospect of about 230 U.S. and Canadian outlets dwindled radically.

In addition, the American Broadcasting Co. decided not to carry the fight on radio in the United States and the British Broadcasting Co. canceled its $100,000 contract to televise the bout live to the United Kingdom via Early Bird satellite.

Two members of the team—Von Ruden and Metcalf—teamed with Arnold Droke and Chris McCubbins to win at Arkansas in 7:38.6. Coach Ralph Higgins, however, still has John Perry around for duty in the two-mile relay.

Perry ran on the victorious OSU sprint medley squad at Arkansas, teaming with Metcalf, Ron Hester and Larry Linn. The winning time was 3:21.1, which broke the old Arkansas record of 3:23.8, set by Southern Illinois in 1963.

The Cowpokes also won the four-mile relay in a comparatively slow time of 17:29.8. But they did beat a strong Kansas State squad.

K-State took the mile relay in a record-equalling time of 3:12.9--and the 880-yard relay.

Kansas suffered a blow when sprinter Bob Hanson, a senior, hurt his right foot. Hanson will undergo an operation during the Easter spring vacation.

"This is a tough blow to us," Timmons said. "Even worse, it's a hard break for Bob."

The operation will probably end Hanson's track career.

John Lawson, Kansas captain and the NCAA cross - country champion, is recovering from a strained knee tendon. It's hoped he'll be ready by Saturday.

Kansas freshman Jim Ryun is also going to the Texas Relays. He will compete in the Jerry Thompson open mile.

Gardner also placed second in rebounding and field goal percentage and fourth in free throw percentage in the Big Eight.

He had time left to earn a 3.559 grade point average in mathematics. The maximum is 4.0.

Bloomfield Upsets Malden In First Round Game

ESSEX -- Tonight will round out the first round games of the tournament with Gray Ridge taking on the Sikeston Highway Department at 7 p.m. and the Sikeston Eldoradoes meeting Boley's at 8:15 p.m.

The last game of the evening Parma and Essex will square off in a second round game.

In last night's action New Madrid swept past Dexter 83-64, Morley defeated Sikeston Canvas factory 89-61, and Bloomfield eked past a cold shooting Malden team 99-93.

In the first game of the evening Linnes McFerren led his New Madrid team to a 45-26 first half lead with a total of 36 points while Benson tallied 17 for losing Dexter.

Morley with a fine second half surge swept the Sikeston Canvas factory 89-61. Abernathy led Morley with a 30 point effort and Brown paced the Sikeston team with 25 points.

Bloomfield pulled a mild upset against the Malden team which is composed mostly of coaches.

Bloomfield ran up an unbeatable 56-39 half time edge and kept the Malden second half surge in check for a 99-93 win.

Ralph Corse led the Bloomfield scoring attack with 35 points and Lavern Garner paced the losing Malden team with 31 points.

Our Bourbon is as old as the Hills.

Back in 1879, William and Scipio Hill, a pair of Kentucky cousins, opened a distillery.

They made precious little of their Bourbon, but what they made came up precious good. Rich and full. And so incredibly smooth that the Hill cousins were able to sell their whiskey for three times the going price.

Today, Hill & Hill is still made the same old way. As patiently as the Hill cousins meant it to be.

So be thankful you can get your Bourbon straight from the Hills of Kentucky.

April 11th Star Dodger Pitchers Go On Set

LOS ANGELES AP -- The baseball season in Los Angeles starts rolling April 12, but for two men who now appear to be ex - Los Angeles Dodgers the cameras will be rolling instead.

April 11 is the day pitchers Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale are scheduled to start Hollywood filming of a story in which a policeman is accused of murder after shooting someone in the line of duty.

They checked into their studio Monday and, asked by a newsman whether they were serious about acting, noted they had a contract to act, but not to play baseball.

They have declined to sign for the 1966 season on grounds the Dodgers have failed to offer more than $85,000 for Drysdale and $100,000 for Koufax. The boys had asked to split $1 million over three years.

"We wouldn't be here if we weren't serious," said Drysdale at the studio. "We are very fortunate we got the offers for these roles."

How did Koufax feel about it all?

"I'll try to do a good job as an actor, but, actually, I'd rather be on the other end in film production," he said.

Grand Jury Investigation Begins Today

CHICAGO (AP) — Gangland terrorism and mobster control of boxing will be scrutinized in a federal grand jury investigation beginning today.

Government attorneys are expected to delve into the possibility that fights were fixed by syndicated mobsters. They also would like to see several gangland figures land in jail.

The action stems from the ill-fated Cassius Clay-Ernie Terrell heavyweight title bout which never came off.

The proposed bout was tossed out of New York, Chicago and finally Montreal before Terrell pulled out altogether.

The fact that it was tossed out of New York resulted in an alleged gangland attack against Bernard Glickman, who then sought protective custody from the FBI and will be the government's star witness in the grand jury hearing.

Glickman, an associate of Terrell reportedly had been warned by the Chicago mob to stay away from the fighter. But when Terrell went to New York to apply for his license to fight Clay, the New York State Athletic Commission refused the request because of Terrell's association with Glickman.

The commission noted that Glickman was on the same plane to New York as was Terrell.

This reportedly so infuriated Chicago mob terrorist Felix (Milwaukee Phil) Alderisio that Alderisio attacked Glickman and threatened the lives of both Glickman and Terrell.

In the meantime, Glickman went into FBI custody and reports were that he was safely tucked away in St. Louis before returning to Chicago for the grand jury hearing.

Terrell says he never had been threatened and that Glickman never was his fight manager although Glickman did act as booking agent for Terrell's night club act.

The Prayer

For Today From The Upper Room

"Man, your sins are forgiven you." (Luke 5:20, RSV)

PRAYER: Dear Lord, my sins are too much for me to handle. Grant me the forgiveness Thou dost give to all sinners who com to Thee in hope of a new life. In love for Thee I pray. Amen.

Mrs. Maria Jane Winston, age 74 years, two months and 16 days, passed away at her home in New Madrid on March 8.

Morehouse-- Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Gray are the proud parents of a baby girl born on Sunday night.

Miner Switch--A. J. Bougher of near Blodgett has moved to the place vacated by W. L. Grigsby and will farm there this year.

30 Years Ago
March 30, 1936

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Coleman have rented the Franklin Moore home, now under construction on Park avenue and expect to occupy it the first of next week.

Twins, a boy and a girl, were born at St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau Monday night to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Haw of Benton. Mr. Haw is a brother of Miss Uriel Haw, an instructor at the Sikeston High School.

Announcement has been received by friends that a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Austin of New York City on March 18. Mrs. Austin was Miss Pauline Moore of Charleston before her marriage.

John A. Young issued building permits this week to Dr. H. M. Kendig for construction of two five-room houses in the Chamber of Commerce addition. One will be built at a cost of $750 and the other of $1,000. Dr. Kendig said the residences will be ones he has bought in Illinois. They will be dismantled as soon as they are vacated and the parts brought down here for reconstruction on Dr. Kendig's lots. The same plan was successfully followed by a Miner Switch resident last year.

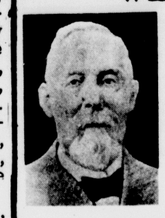
When I Was A Boy



B.F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes.

(Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

Feb. 6, 1920

When I was a boy there was never a year that we did not have an abundance of apples to eat and for making cider and apple butter, and often I have seen the ground covered with fine apples when cold weather came in the fall after everybody had put away all they needed for the winter and spring. I distinctly remember one fall at Glasgow when the commission firm of Nanson & Bartholow bought several thousand barrels of apples from the farmers in the surrounding country. These apples were barreled in the orchards and hauled in and piled up along the wharf ready for shipment to St. Louis, but the market went down so much that the apples would not sell for enough to pay the freight and commission so that all those thousands of barrels of apples were a total loss to the firm that bought them. All through the winter anybody that wanted apples just had the dray to haul them a barrel of those apples free. What a change since then. Now we have plenty of fine apples but they cost you 5 cents each, and some of them ten cents a piece.

When I was a boy a loving couple bent on marriage did not have to go to the trouble and expense of taking out a marriage license as they have to now. If a young couple had determined to get married, they, of course, asked the consent of their parents and if it was granted, well and good, they were married at home, but if consent was refused they ran away and were married some where else. It happened sometimes that ministers were afraid to say the ceremony for a young couple but someone could always be found willing to unite them. It is different now as the young people have to get a license, but if it was left to me I would abolish the license, as when a couple are determined to get married they generally succeed even if they have to go to another state and that adds a considerable expense that could be better used in fitting them up to housekeeping.

When I was a boy I had a mania for reading about everything I could lay my hands on, and that was not very much, and I always had mighty poor light to read by, as I did most of my reading at night, and then either by tallow candles or by light from the fire place. Fiction was my favorite reading matter, but that was hard to get, so I would read anything else that I could lay my hands on. Among the books that I read by that poor light was Josephus, the Jewish historian, Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Plutarch's Lives and a history of the Reformation, when Luther broke away from the mother church. There was 13 volumes of this work, and why I read such dry stuff is more than I can tell now, but guess it was because I had nothing else to read. To a student of ancient history there is no three books that I know of that contains more knowledge than the three first books I have mentioned above, but I am glad to state the the boys and the girls of today have better lights to read by than I had.

When I was a boy I knew a few venerable old preachers that are now dead and forgotten. Among them was the Rev. Andrew Monroe, a minister of the Methodist Church. Another was a venerable old preacher of the Baptist Church by the name of Fristoe. Then there was a grand old patriarch of the Christian, then called Cambellite, Church, named Thomas Allen. I think he was one of the most earnest and venerable looking men I have ever seen. Then there was an old priest, whose presence always commanded respect, and was very popular as were all of these old ministers. At that time the Catholics and Baptists had no congregation or church in Glasgow, but there was a considerable number of both Baptists and Catholics in Glasgow. Away back there I used to argue religion with a mighty fine Catholic girl, but when I grew up I found that neither of us knew much about what we were arguing, which is still the case will many grown up people.

The owner of a service station, Randy Bragg of La Mirada, Calif., reports that he was on duty when a car screeched to a halt in front of his gasoline pumps. "Give me a dollar's worth, quick. My wife's expecting a baby any minute," the distraught driver yelled. Equal to the occasion, Pragg pumped in the gasoline as fast as he could, grabbed the extended dollar and watched as the car roared off toward the hospital. Suddenly the car came to a quick halt, then backed up as the almost-mother poked her head out the window and said, "We forgot the stamps."

New Cabinet Takes Office

JAKARTA, Indonesia AP -- President Sukarno swore in Indonesia's new Cabinet today, and Lt. Gen. Suharto said he thinks critics will give it a chance.

Sukarno in a speech at the swearing-in ceremony also took note of the opposition from students and political groups. He said all people cannot be pleased all the time.

"According to my belief, I have succeeded in making it -the Cabinet- perfect again," Sukarno said, but indicated changes might be made in the future.

"If later we have to make it perfect again, we will change it again in accordance with my conscience," he said.

Sukarno said advice on the Cabinet appointments came from others but he retained full authority in making them.

"I stress these things so persons abroad will know I am not a mere figurehead president," he said.

Suharto, Indonesia's new strongman, told newsmen that although there was dissatisfaction with the new Cabinet, he believed the complainers would give it a chance to try to resolve the country's grave economic problems.

Students and political groups have called for a simplified Cabinet. They have also complained that there are too many old faces left in the government.

Violent student demonstrations toppled the previous Cabinet on Feb. 24, and Sukarno handed over most of his power to Suharto. The students objected to Communists and pro-Communists in the government in the wake of the Communist backed coup attemp last October.

Launch Attempt Will Be Tried

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The space agency was to try again today to launch an orbiting astronomical observatory to give man his first clear look at the stars from above the obscuring blanket of the earth's atmosphere.

An Atlas-Agena rocket was to lift OAO into orbit between 2:11 and 3:11 p.m. The shot was postponed Monday because of weather and technical problems.

An attempt Tuesday to launch an Atlas-Centaur rocket on a test flight was called off just two seconds before liftoff when a power cord failed to disconnect from the rocket.

No new launching date was set for the Atlas-Centaur.

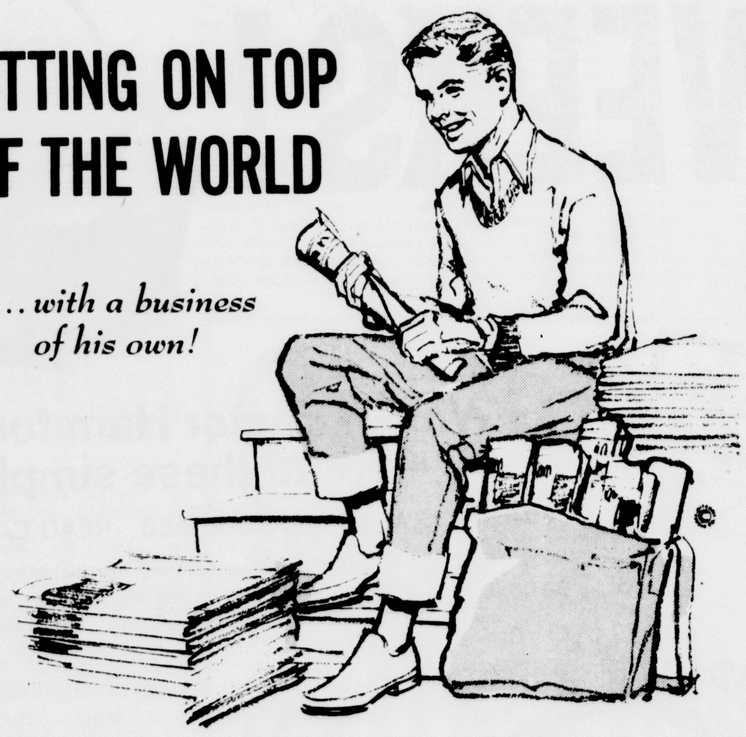
... with a business of his own!



We'd like for you to meet the Executive Officer of a thriving business . . . the boy who delivers your daily newspaper.

As the owner and operator of his newspaper route, this Junior Independent Merchant must solve problems and shoulder responsibilities, just like all other businessmen.

He buys his product, your newspaper, at wholesale and then retails it to his customers. He must make daily deliveries, do his own accounting, billing, and even struggle with a collection problem here and there.

He is discovering, through actual experience, the rewards for promptness, dependability, self-reliance and initiative.

One of the rewards is his profit, the difference between the wholesale and retail prices of the paper. His route means money for a savings account for college, a new bicycle, a week in camp, many things.

But he is earning even greater rewards. As he learns about sales and salesmanship, he is equipping himself for the future. From boys who learned the principles of business as newspaperboys have come presidents, governors, mayors, industrialists and professional men . . . those who determine the quality of our civilization in their generation.

It's his world to conquer . . . and he's off to a good start.

BUSY BOYS ARE BETTER BOYS

If you have a son that you think might be interested in a newspaper route, why not write or phone us.

Among the books that I read by that poor light was Josephus, the Jewish historian, Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Plutarch's Lives and a history of the Reformation, when Luther broke away from the mother church. There was 13 volumes of this work, and why I read such dry stuff is more than I can tell now, but guess it was because I had nothing else to read. To a student of ancient history there is no three books that I know of that contains more knowledge than the three first books I have mentioned above, but I am glad to state the the boys and the girls of today have better lights to read by than I had.

When I was a boy I knew a few venerable old preachers that are now dead and forgotten. Among them was the Rev. Andrew Monroe, a minister of the Methodist Church. Another was a venerable old preacher of the Baptist Church by the name of Fristoe. Then there was a grand old patriarch of the Christian, then called Cambellite, Church, named Thomas Allen. I think he was one of the most earnest and venerable looking men I have ever seen. Then there was an old priest, whose presence always commanded respect, and was very popular as were all of these old ministers. At that time the Catholics and Baptists had no congregation or church in Glasgow, but there was a considerable number of both Baptists and Catholics in Glasgow. Away back there I used to argue religion with a mighty fine Catholic girl, but when I grew up I found that neither of us knew much about what we were arguing, which is still the case will many grown up people.

The owner of a service station, Randy Bragg of La Mirada, Calif., reports that he was on duty when a car screeched to a halt in front of his gasoline pumps. "Give me a dollar's worth, quick. My wife's expecting a baby any minute," the distraught driver yelled. Equal to the occasion, Pragg pumped in the gasoline as fast as he could, grabbed the extended dollar and watched as the car roared off toward the hospital. Suddenly the car came to a quick halt, then backed up as the almost-mother poked her head out the window and said, "We forgot the stamps."

New Cabinet Takes Office

JAKARTA, Indonesia AP -- President Sukarno swore in Indonesia's new Cabinet today, and Lt. Gen. Suharto said he thinks critics will give it a chance.

Sukarno in a speech at the swearing-in ceremony also took note of the opposition from students and political groups. He said all people cannot be pleased all the time.

"According to my belief, I have succeeded in making it -the Cabinet- perfect again," Sukarno said, but indicated changes might be made in the future.

"If later we have to make it perfect again, we will change it again in accordance with my conscience," he said.

Sukarno said advice on the Cabinet appointments came from others but he retained full authority in making them.

"I stress these things so persons abroad will know I am not a mere figurehead president," he said.

Suharto, Indonesia's new strongman, told newsmen that although there was dissatisfaction with the new Cabinet, he believed the complainers would give it a chance to try to resolve the country's grave economic problems.

Students and political groups have called for a simplified Cabinet. They have also complained that there are too many old faces left in the government.

Violent student demonstrations toppled the previous Cabinet on Feb. 24, and Sukarno handed over most of his power to Suharto. The students objected to Communists and pro-Communists in the government in the wake of the Communist backed coup attemp last October.

Launch Attempt Will Be Tried

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The space agency was to try again today to launch an orbiting astronomical observatory to give man his first clear look at the stars from above the obscuring blanket of the earth's atmosphere.

An Atlas-Agena rocket was to lift OAO into orbit between 2:11 and 3:11 p.m. The shot was postponed Monday because of weather and technical problems.

An attempt Tuesday to launch an Atlas-Centaur rocket on a test flight was called off just two seconds before liftoff when a power cord failed to disconnect from the rocket.

No new launching date was set for the Atlas-Centaur.

Medicare May Increase State Taxes, Hearnes Says

KANSAS CITY AP -- Extension of medical services to Missouri's needy under Medicare could mean an increase in state taxes, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes cautioned Tuesday night.

The governor, who addressed the Missouri Medical Association, urged care and deliberation in extending Medicare under state supervision.

"We must be sure," Hearnes said, "that state income will support such medical programs if they are enacted into law, hopefully without tax increases.

"Too often programs are launched in Washington to the clarion call of trumpets, but become realities only when accompanied by the muted sound of dollars making whispered exits from state treasuries."

Adoption of Title 19 of the Medicare Act by the Legislature would expand health services to needy older citizens, dependent children, the disabled and the blind, but at considerable state expense, Hearnes said.

"That part of Title 19 relating to payment for physicians' services to all persons on assistance rolls could, alone, involve a very large outlay of monies," the governor explained.

"All states must either adopt Title 19 by Jan. 1, 1970, or lose federal matching funds for medical care. Title 19 could have tremendous impact upon our state's fiscal position in the years to come."

It is estimated that Missouri medical programs previously held to $2 million annually would cost from $5 to $10 million a year in state tax funds under Title 19.

The association installed Dr. Byron M. Stuart of Boonville as president. Gold pins commemorating a half century of medical service were presented to 20 doctors.

At a panel session Tuesday, Medicare was pictured as a combined federal, state and local task. Various phases of the program were described by Howard L. Bost of Baltimore, deputy director of the Social Security's bureau of health insurance; Procter N. Carter of Jefferson City, director of Missouri's Division of Welfare; and Dr. Ernest B. Howard of Chicago, assistant executive vice president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Avery P. Roweltte of Moberly, member of the State Welfare Medical Advisroy Committee, presided.

Dr. Bost said physicians will not fare badly in Medicare's "fair price" levels for their services. He urged community cooperation in developing qualified nursing home and home-visit nursing and medical care.

"It is our purpose in Baltimore to work in close partnership so that Medicare will be administered satisfactorily both for the public and the profession," Bost said.

Carter said Missouri had 525,000 citizens over 65 years of age and the advent of Medicare on July 1 would substantially reduce state costs for hospital care of the elderly.

Carter added that Title 19 of the Medicare law, affecting the poor and medically indigent of all ages, will vastly broaden state costs compared to the present program.

Dr. Howard said the costs of Medicare will spiral and the program poses a host of problems to organized medicine.

Economics Have Cornered Johnson

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is in a box.

Last January he laid down guidelines for business and labor to prevent inflation. He wanted wage raises limited to 3.2 per cent with no price increases. This was his guideline for both sides.

But prices have gone up. February showed the steepest rise in living costs since the Korean War, with food prices leading the upswing.

Although the rise was only half of 1 per cent it was part of a fairly steady climb, for living costs now are 2.5 per cent above a year ago, the biggest annual increase since 1958.

In the past few days he has telephoned over 25 leaders to ask them to go easy on any spending that might produce inflation. And he invited a number of top businessmen to a White House dinner tonight.

He'll no doubt burn up businessmen who, if they see a chance to make big profits, won't be happy to have Johnson bending their ear about going easy.

Meanwhile, labor is publicly burned up at him for insisting wage increases, when living costs and business profits are going up, must be held to a 3.2 per cent limit.

Labor, which has consistently backed the Democrats, is crucially important to Johnson's party which faces the voters next November in the congressional election, particularly when politician Johnson remembers that the party with a majority in Congress, such as the Democrats have now, traditionally loses seats in an election year when the presidency is not at stake.

No one knows better than Johnson that a tax boost can be poison in an election year.

Slowly and steadily, Johnson has been saying he would propose a tax boost —on individual and corporate income — if he found it necessary to fight inflation.

Tuesday, perhaps, he said it more strongly than ever: "Congress would rather have a modest tax increase of 5, 6 or 7 per cent. . .than to see inflation and the value of the dollar go down."

If there is to be a tax increase, he said, his advisers figure it ought to bring in around $5 billion. And, he warned, if prices continue to go up, he would ask for a tax bill.

But already this year Congress has boosted taxes to bring in about $6 billion over the next 15 months to help finance the Viet Nam war. That was done this month.

It boosted the automobile excise tax, which manufacturers have to pay, and upped the telephone tax. At the same time it provided for tighter pay-as-you-go tax withholdings from individuals and faster tax collections from corporations.

And while Johnson was warning against inflation and the possible need for a tax boost, the House at Johnson's request approved $12 million to provide rent subsidies for poor families — although Johnson had asked more — and $10 million for a Teachers Corps program. Both are part of Johnson's "Great Society" plan.

It was just two years ago that Congress, at Johnson's urging, voted a $19.2-billion tax cut for individuals and corporations extending over 1964 and 1965.

It came out at about an average 19 per cent reduction for individuals and 9 per cent for corporations. When he signed that tax-cut bill in 1964 Johnson said it was the "single most important step we have taken to strengthen our economy since World War II."

Until he actually asks for a tax boost now, it's possible Johnson is using the threat of a boost to persuade business and labor to stick to his guidelines.

Napoleon was very fond of residing in Fontainebleau, a town located in the middle of a huge forest.

Deadline Near For Aged Signup

WASHINGTON AP -- Persons over 65 have only until Thursday night to sign up for the voluntary doctor bill insurance plan that becomes effective July 1 under the medicare program.

Social Security officials said they expect a last-minute rush of enrollments to push the number signed up to nearly 90 per cent of the more than 16.5 million persons eligible.

The agency's offices will stay open late tonight and until midnight Thursday to accommodate the estimated 1.6 million persons who have not yet registered. Those signing up will pay a premium of $3 monthly.

Twenty House Republicans asked the White House Tuesday to support their proposal to extend the registration deadline past March 31.

Captain Grounded

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP--They've grounded Capt. Jack Spey, and he agrees it was high time.

The big, blond pilot from Southern Pines, N.C. has flown his last C123 mission in Viet Nam and will return to the United States as an instructor.

"It was time, I guess," the veteran of four years in the war theater said. "I've been under fire just about enough and have seen a lot of buddies hit. That can get to be an emotional problem."

Spey's major task was the defoliation program, with his duties among the most dangerous in the fight against the Viet Cong. To defoliate, he had to bring his twin-engine cargo plane "right in on the deck," at tree-top level and hold it there for about four minutes to unload the chemical that withers the jungle and deprives the insurgents of protective cover.

At that level and flying pretty slowly, the C123s are tempting targets for groundfire even though they are accompanied by fighter cover.

Spey's squadron has collected 17 Purple Hearts, but look at the captain's record: Combat hours in Viet Nam, 1,750; craft hit by Viet Cong fire, 300 times.

Spey's crew has been hit but he never got a bullet.

He and his various copilots always alternated in their jobs. One day he would fly the craft while the copilot worked the engines, a difficult job at low level. Next time he would take the copilot's seat.

"The copilot really has the harder job," he said. "It's real teamwork and both of you must know just what the other one is thinking. You don't make preplanned strategy. It all depends what you run into down there. Then it takes split-second adjusting to the situation and that copilot has to give you the thrust you need for the tactic you've adopted. There's no time for talk, it must be instinctive."

The captain, 27, won the Distinguished Flying Cross last year. His plane was clobbered by groundfire. One engine was shot out.

"I was right on the deck and groaning over a village full of Viet Cong and they all seemed to be firing on us at the same time," he recalled. "I was really scared even though fighters and helicopters all came to help. A loose cable we hadn't noticed at first meant we were not getting full thrust on the remaining engine. I fought that thing until I got over the water and up to 2,500 feet but it was a pretty sick ship. We readied for ditching but I finally got down at Soc Trang."

Spey has been in the defoliation program almost since it started and however rough and noisy some critics think the C123 workhorse is, the captain loves them.

"They're simple and reliable," he said.

The chemical sprayed on jungle and other foliage is a commercial type used in the United States. It is dispensed at the height of the growing season. Grasses die within three to four days. In six weeks leaves wrinkle up and drop off. The chemical does not sterilize the soil.

A small bird fell out of its nest and broke its neck on our cement patio. Full of compassion and the spirit of St. Francis, our seven-year-old daughter and our neighbor's little girl gave it a fine burial. Later in the day I noticed that passersby were stopping to look at the trees in front of both our home and our neighbor's, and as they continued on their way they seemed highly amused. I was moved to laughter myself when I investigated. All the trees on both boulevards were decked with signs which read: "Teillet and DePape Funeral Home. We bury all dogs, cats, birds and small animals. Please no aunts."

--Mrs. Joseph Teillet

Ocean Whirlpool Pleases Scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — To the delight of oceanographers, a piece of the Gulf Stream has broken loose from its parent current and is going 'round and 'round 600 miles east of Boston.

The reason the scientists are pleased is this:

The newly discovered eddy — or whirlpool — of warm water, about 50 miles in diameter, is a kind of made-to-order laboratory to help them in complex studies which could some day result in accurate long-range weather forecasts and — who knows? — maybe weather controls.

The elaborately equipped ship Explorer, of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, which has recently been at Norfolk, Va., is due to take to sea again soon to study the eddy in detail. And a special plane from the naval air station at Patuxent, Md., is expected to cooperate. It can spot the eddy by means of an infrared radiation thermometer.

The Gulf Stream is a gigantic current of water which issues from the Gulf of Mexico and proceeds northeastward to a point east of the Grand Banks off Newfoundland. It has a marked effect on the weather, especially the clime of Europe. The weather of that continent is affected, in large part, by conditions in the Atlantic Ocean, while United States weather often bears the label "made in Canada."

Lt. Cmdr. Ray Moses of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, who is coordinator of a Gulf Stream study project now under way, explained how the eddy broke loose.

The Gulf Stream is in some ways like a river in the ocean. And those who remember their elementary geology will recall how rivers, especially those that are in their old age geologically speaking, tend to wander or meander.

Sometimes they curve right back on themselves, and then go on their way, leaving a doughnut-shaped body of water behind, totally separated from the parent stream.

This is what happened recently with the Gulf Stream; it left behind a warm water eddy or meander, for the first time, so far as is known, in at least 10 years.

The eddy is too small to have any appreciable effect, in itself, on the weather. But scientists hope to learn more from it about how warm and cold water mix in the oceans, which largely control the temperature and moisture content of the air.

PRUNES FOR BREAKFAST, LUNCH AND DINNER

Underneath their dark, wrinkled skins, prunes have a wealth of good food value.

These "plus - good" fruits are rich in iron, and have some calcium, both of which must be checked constantly in the daily diet. They also provide some Vitamin A and B1.

But prunes' real value to homemakers lies in their versatility. Starting at the beginning of the day, prunes fit smoothly into all your mealtime plans.

At breakfast, prunes are excellent for your fruit course or to add flavor appeal to cooked cereal.

At lunchtime, stuffed prunes make an excellent salad ingredient, especially when combined with colorful fresh or canned fruit. For example, tempt the family with orange and grapefruit slices combined with either pineapple or peach halves and a prune stuffed with peanut butter, cream cheese or cottage cheese.

Of if you're a sandwich eater, try mixing ground up prunes with peant butter then adding chopped apples, nuts and other dried fruits. It's a real taste treat.

But prunes' real forte is dessert making. You'll find the family enjoys prunes in everything from upside down cake to pie. And right now is an excellent time to begin using these delicious fruits in your menu scheme. For according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, there are abundant supplies at your local store.

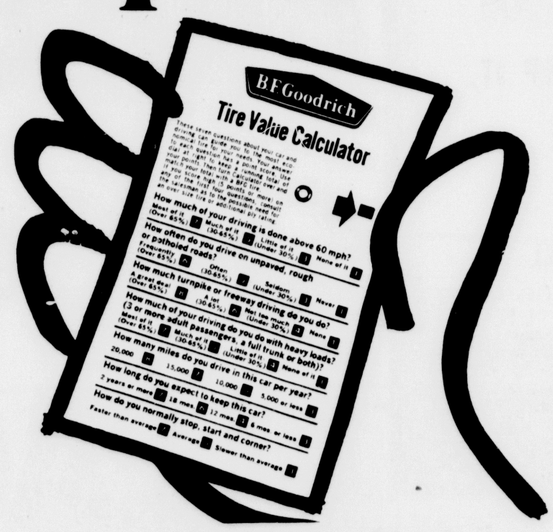
Next time you have to buy tires, take this instead of aspirin.



Buying tires is a headache for lots of people.

So we've come up with a cure: the Tire Value Calculator. It can figure out what tire you need for the driving you do.

That means you won't have to struggle through all that gibberish about tire cords, ply ratings and rubber compounds. Or sweat over a confusing array of tire grades and prices.

Not at B.F.Goodrich, anyway. We've got a new way of doing business. We give you straight talk. And back it up with our Calculator.

You tell it how you drive—the speeds, the roads, the loads. Then it tells you which tough BFG tire will suit you best, cost you least. It's as simple as that.

We think you'll find tire-buying painless at B.F.Goodrich. But if headaches persist, see your doctor.

The straight-talk tire people. B.F.Goodrich

Ocean Whirlpool Pleases Scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — To the delight of oceanographers, a piece of the Gulf Stream has broken loose from its parent current and is going 'round and 'round 600 miles east of Boston.

The reason the scientists are pleased is this:

The newly discovered eddy — or whirlpool — of warm water, about 50 miles in diameter, is a kind of made-to-order laboratory to help them in complex studies which could some day result in accurate long-range weather forecasts and — who knows? — maybe weather controls.

The elaborately equipped ship Explorer, of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, which has recently been at Norfolk, Va., is due to take to sea again soon to study the eddy in detail. And a special plane from the naval air station at Patuxent, Md., is expected to cooperate. It can spot the eddy by means of an infrared radiation thermometer.

The Gulf Stream is a gigantic current of water which issues from the Gulf of Mexico and proceeds northeastward to a point east of the Grand Banks off Newfoundland. It has a marked effect on the weather, especially the clime of Europe. The weather of that continent is affected, in large part, by conditions in the Atlantic Ocean, while United States weather often bears the label "made in Canada."

Lt. Cmdr. Ray Moses of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, who is coordinator of a Gulf Stream study project now under way, explained how the eddy broke loose.

The Gulf Stream is in some ways like a river in the ocean. And those who remember their elementary geology will recall how rivers, especially those that are in their old age geologically speaking, tend to wander or meander.

Sometimes they curve right back on themselves, and then go on their way, leaving a doughnut-shaped body of water behind, totally separated from the parent stream.

This is what happened recently with the Gulf Stream; it left behind a warm water eddy or meander, for the first time, so far as is known, in at least 10 years.

The eddy is too small to have any appreciable effect, in itself, on the weather. But scientists hope to learn more from it about how warm and cold water mix in the oceans, which largely control the temperature and moisture content of the air.

PRUNES FOR BREAKFAST, LUNCH AND DINNER

Underneath their dark, wrinkled skins, prunes have a wealth of good food value.

These "plus - good" fruits are rich in iron, and have some calcium, both of which must be checked constantly in the daily diet. They also provide some Vitamin A and B1.

But prunes' real value to homemakers lies in their versatility. Starting at the beginning of the day, prunes fit smoothly into all your mealtime plans.

At breakfast, prunes are excellent for your fruit course or to add flavor appeal to cooked cereal.

At lunchtime, stuffed prunes make an excellent salad ingredient, especially when combined with colorful fresh or canned fruit. For example, tempt the family with orange and grapefruit slices combined with either pineapple or peach halves and a prune stuffed with peanut butter, cream cheese or cottage cheese.

Of if you're a sandwich eater, try mixing ground up prunes with peant butter then adding chopped apples, nuts and other dried fruits. It's a real taste treat.

But prunes' real forte is dessert making. You'll find the family enjoys prunes in everything from upside down cake to pie. And right now is an excellent time to begin using these delicious fruits in your menu scheme.

For according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, there are abundant supplies at your local store.

Next time you have to buy tires, take this instead of aspirin.

Buying tires is a headache for lots of people.

So we've come up with a cure: the Tire Value Calculator. It can figure out what tire you need for the driving you do.

That means you won't have to struggle through all that gibberish about tire cords, ply ratings and rubber compounds. Or sweat over a confusing array of tire grades and prices.

Not at B.F.Goodrich, anyway. We've got a new way of doing business. We give you straight talk. And back it up with our Calculator.

You tell it how you drive—the speeds, the roads, the loads. Then it tells you which tough BFG tire will suit you best, cost you least. It's as simple as that.

We think you'll find tire-buying painless at B.F.Goodrich. But if headaches persist, see your doctor.

Paratrooper Frees Self and Lands Safely

FT. CAMPBELL, Ky. AP--After flying like a kite behind an airplane traveling 135 miles an hour, a young paratrooper freed himself and landed safely.

"It was like getting a second chance," said Pfc. Michael A. McDonald, 17, of Missoula, Mont.

McDonald, a member of the 101st Airborne Division here, landed in a pine tree after freeing himself from tangled parachute lines during a training exercise over North Carolina Tuesday.

The static line connecting the soldier's parachute to a C119 transport failed to disconnect during the practice assault, the Army said, and McDonald flew behind the plane for nearly seven minutes.

One of 224 Ft. Campbell troopers taking part in the exercise, he had leaped from the aircraft at 1,500 feet.

Crewmen on the plane were unable to haul McDonald aboard because his arms had become entangled in lines connecting his shoulder harness with the parachute canopy.

After clearing his arms, he signaled the crewmen he was conscious, the Army said, and the static line snapped, enabling him to fall free of the plane.

His reserve parachute opened at 300 feet, McDonald said.

RECIPES

CHEESE SOUFFLE

4 tblspns. butter or margarine
4 tblspns. flour
¼ teaspoon dry mustard dash of pepper
1 cup milk
1 cup grated sharp cheese
4 egg yolks
1 teaspoon salt
5 egg whites

Set a 1½ quart ungreased casserole in a shallow baking pan; place in 325 degree oven. Pour boiling water around casserole to depth of at least one inch; let casserole heat while souffle is prepared.

Meanwhile, melt butter or margarine in saucepan. Add flour, mustard and pepper and blend well. Add milk all at once and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbly. Remove from heat and add slowly to egg yolks, beating well.

Add salt to egg whites and beat until shiny and whites leave peaks that fold over when beater is withdrawn. Pour yolk-cheese mixture gradually over egg whites, folding carefully at the same time. Pour mixture into hot casserole. Circle mixture with a spoon about 1 inch from side of casserole and 1 inch deep.

Bake until puffy, delicately browned, and a knife inserted halfway between center and outside edge comes out clean, about 70 minutes. Serve immediately. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

POTATO DUMPLINGS WITH SAUERKRAUT

1 qt. sauerkraut or 1 No. 2½ can sauerkraut
1¼ cups mashed potato
1 egg
½ cup evaporated milk
½ cup water from potatoes
1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder

Add 1½ quarts of water to sauerkraut in deep pan. Heat. Prepare the dumplings: Beat egg and combine egg with mashed potato; stir in milk and potato water; sift flour with salt and baking powder and add to potato mixture. One tablespoon finely chopped parsley may be added to the dumplings, if desired. Drop by spoonfuls on top of boiling sauerkraut, cover kettle with tight fitting lid and continue boiling until dumplings are steamed, about 8 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Family Budget Squeeze Possible

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK AP -- The rising cost of living and rising tax payments could put a pincher squeeze on many a family budget.

This means that people would have less money after taxes with which to pay the higher prices that already are here or announced as on the way.

It is one aspect -- a highly personal one for most families -- of the debate over the threat of inflation and the need for higher taxes as a curb on future and steeper price increases.

The tax bite already is sharper. Talk of a further boost at the federal level blows hot and cold.

Tax payments that already have gone up this year are the Social Security levies, excise taxes on new cars, and on phone calls. Soon to shrink many pay checks will be larger withholding for federal income taxes, although the total bill will stay the same -- at least for the time being. Many state and community taxes have gone up, too, with more increases apparently on the way.

The rise in the cost of living has been pretty well distributed all along the line of goods and services for more than a year. But in recent months the biggest item has been a jump in food prices.

Here, government officials are holding out hopes that the worst may be over, or nearly so. They expect food supplies to expand during the spring and summer.

One disturbing prospect is the probable effect of the big jump which wholesale prices took last month -- the biggest rise since the Korean War. It will take time for many of these price hikes to work their way into the price tags on consumer items.

Higher prices usually are classed as the sign of, or end product of, inflation. Higher taxes are advocated as a curb on inflation.

The argument is that if individuals and corporations have to pay larger tax bills, they won't have the money to bid up prices on consumer or industrial goods and materials. A spending spree by consumers make price increases both easier and more likely.

President's Bill Declared Complex

WASHINGTON AP --Senators on the Government Operations Committee said yesterday President Johnson's bill to establish a Cabinet department of transportation is so complex it could take them weeks to digest it.

Chairman John L. McClellan, D-Ark., opening the congressional hearings on the proposal, said "no one need except us to report out this bill in half a dozen days."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said "it looks as if it will take weeks and weeks of study."

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., sponsor of the bill and the first witness, agreed that "this is a very major, complex piece of legislation."

He testified that he himself favored numerous amendments.

Johnson urged the new agency in a special message to Congress March 2. He said it would bring together various bureaus with almost 100,000 employes and with annual budgets totaling $6 billion.

UNINVITED GUEST

Yes, brown spider, you have your rights;
You've worked for many days and nights
To build so fine a snare;
You tied each end with skill and care
But left the middle hanging in the air
Right where my broom would fall on it,
Where now no fly will ever stall on it.
Why will you build where you're not wanted;
Where your lovely work, so vainly flaunted,
Will be forever, ever haunted
With fear of swift descending doom
From my careless cleaning broom?

Special Fails

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News made a valiant effort Tuesday night to present a subject much in the headlines and plaguing a large segment of the civilian, law enforcement and legal community. It involves allegations of police brutality and disregard of the rights of the accused on one hand and stringent legal restraints on police procedures on the other.

"CBS Reports" presented the tangled and emotion-wrapped subject in some sort of understandable visual form. But it failed simply because it was impossible to get candid shots to illustrate the vital points.

"The Policeman's Lot" summarized the problem by narration and the usual statements by authorities and experts. It quoted the awesome statistics —14 serious crimes per 1,000 population, a 13 per cent increase in crime last year over 1964, New York City police alone receiving more than four million telephone calls a year, most of all big - city arrests for drunkenness and vagrancy.

But when it came to illustrating the heart of the matter, there were no pictures of policemen interrogating a suspect, and no film showing a suggestion of police brutality.

The program was at its best when it focused on the smaller, more human aspects of police work. There were shots made in a station house as the desk lieutenant handled an assortment of routine problems — family rows, street fights, drunks, cranks, small thieves and rapists.

The point made by the program was that our courts are becoming increasingly sensitive about the rights of the accused with the result that police are finding court-ordered restraints and directives increasingly frustrating. It might have been made more strongly and clearly in a dramatic show like the old "Defenders" series or even by a panel discussion.

RICE AMERICAN STYLE (S)

Americans homemakers use rice in thousands of different ways at breakfast as a cereal or in hot bread, at lunch or supper in soups, salads, main dishes or desserts. And it's all top quality rice from Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana, and California, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Down Louisiana way, rice is in about everything except coffee. Every Creole dinner includes rice, as does Gumbo, a mixture of many ingredients with okra or file powder for thickening.

Hot rice griddle cakes, waffles, batter bread or spoon bread also are southern favorites.

In the Midwest, patticularly in Iowa, rice is an important part of Mulligan or Hobo Stew. Dutch communities in Michigan rate Zalm Met Ryst, creamed salmon on rice, a favorite.

In the New England states, rice is served often with maple syrup and cream as a dessert. While on the West Coast, oriental rice dishes are more popular.

Whatever the dish or where it's popular, homemakers can count on top quality American-grown rice, which is reported by USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service as particularly plentiful right now.

Family Budget Squeeze Possible

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK AP -- The rising cost of living and rising tax payments could put a pincher squeeze on many a family budget.

This means that people would have less money after taxes with which to pay the higher prices that already are here or announced as on the way.

It is one aspect -- a highly personal one for most families -- of the debate over the threat of inflation and the need for higher taxes as a curb on future and steeper price increases.

The tax bite already is sharper. Talk of a further boost at the federal level blows hot and cold.

Tax payments that already have gone up this year are the Social Security levies, excise taxes on new cars, and on phone calls. Soon to shrink many pay checks will be larger withholding for federal income taxes, although the total bill will stay the same -- at least for the time being. Many state and community taxes have gone up, too, with more increases apparently on the way.

The rise in the cost of living has been pretty well distributed all along the line of goods and services for more than a year. But in recent months the biggest item has been a jump in food prices.

Here, government officials are holding out hopes that the worst may be over, or nearly so. They expect food supplies to expand during the spring and summer.

One disturbing prospect is the probable effect of the big jump which wholesale prices took last month -- the biggest rise since the Korean War. It will take time for many of these price hikes to work their way into the price tags on consumer items.

Higher prices usually are classed as the sign of, or end product of, inflation. Higher taxes are advocated as a curb on inflation.

The argument is that if individuals and corporations have to pay larger tax bills, they won't have the money to bid up prices on consumer or industrial goods and materials. A spending spree by consumers make price increases both easier and more likely.

President's Bill Declared Complex

WASHINGTON AP --Senators on the Government Operations Committee said yesterday President Johnson's bill to establish a Cabinet department of transportation is so complex it could take them weeks to digest it.

Chairman John L. McClellan, D-Ark., opening the congressional hearings on the proposal, said "no one need except us to report out this bill in half a dozen days."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said "it looks as if it will take weeks and weeks of study."

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., sponsor of the bill and the first witness, agreed that "this is a very major, complex piece of legislation."

He testified that he himself favored numerous amendments.

Johnson urged the new agency in a special message to Congress March 2. He said it would bring together various bureaus with almost 100,000 employes and with annual budgets totaling $6 billion.

UNINVITED GUEST

Yes, brown spider, you have your rights;
You've worked for many days and nights
To build so fine a snare;
You tied each end with skill and care
But left the middle hanging in the air
Right where my broom would fall on it,
Where now no fly will ever stall on it.
Why will you build where you're not wanted;
Where your lovely work, so vainly flaunted,
Will be forever, ever haunted
With fear of swift descending doom
From my careless cleaning broom?
You weren't invited to my guest room.

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News made a valiant effort Tuesday night to present a subject much in the headlines and plaguing a large segment of the civilian, law enforcement and legal community. It involves allegations of police brutality and disregard of the rights of the accused on one hand and stringent legal restraints on police procedures on the other.

"CBS Reports" presented the tangled and emotion-wrapped subject in some sort of understandable visual form. But it failed simply because it was impossible to get candid shots to illustrate the vital points.

"The Policeman's Lot" summarized the problem by narration and the usual statements by authorities and experts. It quoted the awesome statistics —14 serious crimes per 1,000 population, a 13 per cent increase in crime last year over 1964, New York City police alone receiving more than four million telephone calls a year, most of all big - city arrests for drunkenness and vagrancy.

Yerovi New President of Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Clemente Yerovi Indaburo, a nonpartisan economist, has been named provisional president of Ecuador after student demonstrators, businessmen and labor leaders brought down the military junta.

Yerovi, 62, was appointed Tuesday by the military high command which threw out the three-man junta. The high command said it named Yerovi on the advice of political leaders and fully supported him.

The appointment of a civilian president ended five days of violent anti-junta student demonstrations in which at least seven persons were killed and a business strike in Guayaquil, Ecuador's port and largest city.

The students claimed the junta's policies were oppressive. The businessmen opposed new taxes and import restrictions.

The military command said it was dissolving the junta "to avoid chaos and anarchy." There were indications that the military chiefs acted without the junta's knowledge, but junta members had said earlier they would resign if a civilian president could be agreed on.

The whereabouts of the junta members — Rear Adm. Ramon Castro Jijon, Gen. Marcos Gandara and Gen. Cabrera Sevilla — was not immediately known. There were unconfirmed reports that they had fled to Brazil or Peru.

The junta had ruled since the drunkenness of President Carlos Arosemena became a public scandal and the military threw him out on July 11, 1963.

Yerovi was proposed for provisional president by ex-President Galo Plaza Lasso in whose 1948 - 52 administration he served as minister of agriculture.

During that term in office, Yerovi was given much credit for increasing the country's banana exports. He also served as first president of the National Planning Council and as Ecuador's ambassador to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Paris. He also represented his country at the Common Market in Europe.

Yerovi is regarded as a liberal. He has never been a member of any political party and is respected by all political factions for his competence in the economic field.

In Washington, the State Department had no reaction to the junta's ouster and Yerovi's appointment.

Five-Year Term Given For Forgery

KENNETT-- Paul Hickman, 25, of Kennett was sentenced to five years in the custody of the Missouri department of corrections in circuit court over which Judge Arthur U. Goodman, Jr., presided.

Hickman had been found guilty of passing a forged check by a jury on March 16 and Prosecuting Attorney Charles H. Baker had recommended a term of 10 years for the crime.

This recommendation was reduced yesterday to five years because of a recommendation of 12 years in the armed robbery case against Hickman which was tried Tuesday. Two additional felony charges are pending against the defendant.

In the felony case against Charles Gail Beck, 20, of Clarkton, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, Judge William L. Ragland, regular judge of the 34th judicial circuit of New Madrid and Pemiscot counties was designated special judge upon the sustaining of the defendant's application to disqualify Judge Goodman.

Yerovi New President of Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Clemente Yerovi Indaburo, a nonpartisan economist, has been named provisional president of Ecuador after student demonstrators, businessmen and labor leaders brought down the military junta.

Yerovi, 62, was appointed Tuesday by the military high command which threw out the three-man junta. The high command said it named Yerovi on the advice of political leaders and fully supported him.

The appointment of a civilian president ended five days of violent anti-junta student demonstrations in which at least seven persons were killed and a business strike in Guayaquil, Ecuador's port and largest city.

The students claimed the junta's policies were oppressive. The businessmen opposed new taxes and import restrictions.

The military command said it was dissolving the junta "to avoid chaos and anarchy." There were indications that the military chiefs acted without the junta's knowledge, but junta members had said earlier they would resign if a civilian president could be agreed on.

The whereabouts of the junta members — Rear Adm. Ramon Castro Jijon, Gen. Marcos Gandara and Gen. Cabrera Sevilla — was not immediately known. There were unconfirmed reports that they had fled to Brazil or Peru.

The junta had ruled since the drunkenness of President Carlos Arosemena became a public scandal and the military threw him out on July 11, 1963.

Yerovi was proposed for provisional president by ex-President Galo Plaza Lasso in whose 1948 - 52 administration he served as minister of agriculture.

During that term in office, Yerovi was given much credit for increasing the country's banana exports. He also served as first president of the National Planning Council and as Ecuador's ambassador to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Paris. He also represented his country at the Common Market in Europe.

Yerovi is regarded as a liberal. He has never been a member of any political party and is respected by all political factions for his competence in the economic field.

In Washington, the State Department had no reaction to the junta's ouster and Yerovi's appointment.

Five-Year Term Given For Forgery

KENNETT-- Paul Hickman, 25, of Kennett was sentenced to five years in the custody of the Missouri department of corrections in circuit court over which Judge Arthur U. Goodman, Jr., presided.

Hickman had been found guilty of passing a forged check by a jury on March 16 and Prosecuting Attorney Charles H. Baker had recommended a term of 10 years for the crime.

This recommendation was reduced yesterday to five years because of a recommendation of 12 years in the armed robbery case against Hickman which was tried Tuesday. Two additional felony charges are pending against the defendant.

In the felony case against Charles Gail Beck, 20, of Clarkton, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, Judge William L. Ragland, regular judge of the 34th judicial circuit of New Madrid and Pemiscot counties was designated special judge upon the sustaining of the defendant's application to disqualify Judge Goodman.

Outlay for Plant Rejected

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee rejected Tuesday a $500,000 allotment approved by the House to buy the old Tweedie shoe factory east of the Capitol.

A St. Louis developer has an option on the riverfront site to build a luxury hotel and restaurant.

The amount was requested by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who has asked the attorney general to start preparing for a condemnation proceeding to acquire the now closed factory.

Also struck out of the emergency money bill to keep state agencies going until the end of the fiscal year June 30 was an extra $157.229 for the motor vehicle registration unit. The committee felt the request had not been fully justified.

The Senate committee action sets the stage for these and other minor changes to be considered by a House-Senate conference committee later.

Reaches for Brake

SPOKANE, Wash. AP -- Mary Ricketts drove into a parking lot Tuesday, started to set the parking brake and grabbed a snake.

As she came down to earth again, the reptile slithered behind the dashboard.

A rescuing deputy shooed a small water snake out of the car.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Wednesday, March 30, the 89th day of 1966. There are 276 days left in the year.

On this date in 1867, Secretary of State William Seward signed a treaty with a Russian representative in Washington providing for the sale by Russia of the Alaskan Territory. The United States was to pay $7.2 million in gold for the vast area.

On this date

In 1822, territorial government was established in Florida.

In 1893, Thomas Bayard was made the first U.S. ambassador to Great Britain -- until then the post carried the title of minister.

In 1938, Daylight Saving Time went into effect in the United States.

In 1933, radio-telephone service was opened between the United States and the Philippines.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced the setting up of a Pacific War Council.

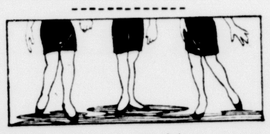
Ten years ago--A survey showed at least 166 deaths in two great snowstorms since March 19 from Maine to West Virginia.

Five years ago--President John F. Kennedy announced the selection of a National Advisory Council for the Peace Corps with Vice President Lyndon Johnson as its chairman.

One year ago -- Alabama Gov. George Wallace received an equal rights delegation in Montgomery, Ala., after twice refusing to see them.

BATHTUB SHOULDN'T BE PUT UNDER A WINDOW

Have you ever noticed how often the bathtub in older homes is placed under a window? This is a mistake that should be avoided if you're planning a new home or thinking of modernizing an existing bathroom, the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau points out. Such a location is drafty and uncomfortable for the bather. It makes use of a shower impractical. Moreover, it's hard to open and close the window, and hanging curtains or installing and removing screens become doubly irksome.



To stay in fashion nowadays a gal has to take it nice and kneesy.

Then along comes vacation time, we take off on a trip, all the while worrying what's going on back on the job, and only half enjoying the vacation for fear of the chaos we were sure to find when we returned. Then, bingo, we returned only to find the business ran right on just the same. Good for a person."

Childs Opens New Store In Sikeston

Today marks another step of progress for Walker C. Childs, owner of two IGA foodliners in Cape Girardeau and the one in Sikeston that opens it's doors to customers today on highway 61 south.

Childs began retail merchandising in 1931. His gross receipts the first day in operation were $1.50.

His original store that he began business in was destroyed in the 1949 tornado which devastated large sections of Cape Girardeau.

He entered business with $150 capital.

Childs announced Aug. 10, 1965 that he was to own and operate a food store in Sikeston.

At the new store there are parking facilities to accomodate 150 automobiles.

The newest checking equipment and registers and lanes, (express lanes), will be utilized to speed shoppers and eliminate long waiting lines.

Childs said that it has been his ambition for many years to have a store in Sikeston.

Earl Childs, a brother, is to manage the store.

Walker Childs was born in Cape Girardeau in 1906. His father, Curtis L. Childs, was a member of the Cape Girardeau police force.

The store will specialize in perishable merchandise having more space devoted to the display of perishables than any store in Southeast Missouri and will feature a fine assortment of meats, fruits, vegetables and groceries.

Learn from the mistakes of others--it's an easy way to acquire a practical education.

Dr. L. Binder

The history of Mr. C's IGA, is truly a family affair, and now that his brother, Earl Childs and his wife Verlene, will take over the management of the new store in Sikeston, for the owner, Walker Childs.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Childs returned to their native Missouri last fall, after the owner decided on the expansion program.

The new manager was born in Cape Girardeau, where he was educated in the public schools and high school. He was married to the former Miss Verline McDaniel, Cape Girardeau in 1938, when the couple came to Sikeston to be married in the first Methodist church.

He had a little early background training in the grocery business when he assisted his brother in opening his first grocery in Marble City Heights, the northern portion of Cape Girardeau from 1934 to 1938.

The opening of the Mr. C's IGA store in Sikeston today is also the 16th anniversary of the opening of his first major enterprise in Cape Girardeau, when the Walker Childs IGA store was opened in 1939 on West Broadway, following the devastating tornado that took both his home and his store in Marble City Heights.

Just how the Childs family is entwined in the food business can be learned as his daughter and son-in-law are in charge of the two stores in Cape Girardeau, on West Broadway and at the Town Plaza. With the opening of the new store in Sikeston, brings the owner, Walker Childs, and his brother Earl and his wife from Tucson, Ariz.

This will not be the end to the Childs family chain, as 19-year-old Kay Karen Childs, a freshman at Cape State College, will join her parents at the store during the summer months. She is presently helping in the Cape Girardeau stores while attending college. Karen was honored in Tucson recently when she was chosen queen of Bethel No. 11 International Order of Jobs Daughters.

In the late 1930s Mr. and Mrs. Earl Childs went to Douglas, Ariz., where he took a position with the J. C. Penney Company for a short time, until he decided to move to Tucson, to take a position with the Southern Pacific railroad.

His train service took him between Tucson and Lordsburg, N. Mex., and his liking for the railroad caused him to enlist in the transportation service in the China-India-Burma theater in World War 2. While in service he received training in warehousing and transporting supplies for troops over the entire Asiatic theater action in the Far East.

Mr. and Mrs. Childs have moved to their new home they purchased at 928 Davis boulevard. Walker Childs, the owner, will also be associated here with the new store, and will be spending part of his time looking after his two stores in Cape Girardeau, now being operated by his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Swob.

The wife of the new manager here will be in charge of the courtesy counter.

THE WORM TURNS

New Yorkers in some numbers have been annoyed and even outraged by the arrogant manner in which United Nations diplomats with special license plates ignore the city's traffic laws. The gentry in question park double, park in bus stops, etc. A secretary of the Cyprus delegation recently left his automobile in a bus stop space and with two wheels on the sidewalk for good measure.

When the Cypriot returned he found all the air out of the tires. It suggests that some worm finally turned and perhaps the so-called diplomat will take the hint. Theoretically, of course, such protests are not in good form, but practically there will be much sympathy with the move. On the New Jersey Turnpike the officers continue to lead off to secondary road diplomats who break the laws. Maybe a long needed trend is developing.

Then along comes vacation time, we take off on a trip, all the while worrying what's going on back on the job, and only half enjoying the vacation for fear of the chaos we were sure to find when we returned. Then, bingo, we returned only to find the business ran right on just the same. Good for a person."

Childs Opens New Store In Sikeston

Today marks another step of progress for Walker C. Childs, owner of two IGA foodliners in Cape Girardeau and the one in Sikeston that opens it's doors to customers today on highway 61 south.

Childs began retail merchandising in 1931. His gross receipts the first day in operation were $1.50.

His original store that he began business in was destroyed in the 1949 tornado which devastated large sections of Cape Girardeau.

He entered business with $150 capital.

Childs announced Aug. 10, 1965 that he was to own and operate a food store in Sikeston.

At the new store there are parking facilities to accomodate 150 automobiles.

The newest checking equipment and registers and lanes, (express lanes), will be utilized to speed shoppers and eliminate long waiting lines.

Childs said that it has been his ambition for many years to have a store in Sikeston.

Earl Childs, a brother, is to manage the store.

Walker Childs was born in Cape Girardeau in 1906. His father, Curtis L. Childs, was a member of the Cape Girardeau police force.

The store will specialize in perishable merchandise having more space devoted to the display of perishables than any store in Southeast Missouri and will feature a fine assortment of meats, fruits, vegetables and groceries.

Learn from the mistakes of others--it's an easy way to acquire a practical education.

Walker C. Childs, owner of all three stores.

The history of Mr. C's IGA, is truly a family affair, and now that his brother, Earl Childs and his wife Verlene, will take over the management of the new store in Sikeston, for the owner, Walker Childs.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Childs returned to their native Missouri last fall, after the owner decided on the expansion program.

The new manager was born in Cape Girardeau, where he was educated in the public schools and high school. He was married to the former Miss Verline McDaniel, Cape Girardeau in 1938, when the couple came to Sikeston to be married in the first Methodist church.

He had a little early background training in the grocery business when he assisted his brother in opening his first grocery in Marble City Heights, the northern portion of Cape Girardeau from 1934 to 1938.

The opening of the Mr. C's IGA store in Sikeston today is also the 16th anniversary of the opening of his first major enterprise in Cape Girardeau, when the Walker Childs IGA store was opened in 1939 on West Broadway, following the devastating tornado that took both his home and his store in Marble City Heights.

Just how the Childs family is entwined in the food business can be learned as his daughter and son-in-law are in charge of the two stores in Cape Girardeau, on West Broadway and at the Town Plaza. With the opening of the new store in Sikeston, brings the owner, Walker Childs, and his brother Earl and his wife from Tucson, Ariz.

This will not be the end to the Childs family chain, as 19-year-old Kay Karen Childs, a freshman at Cape State College, will join her parents at the store during the summer months. She is presently helping in the Cape Girardeau stores while attending college. Karen was honored in Tucson recently when she was chosen queen of Bethel No. 11 International Order of Jobs Daughters.

In the late 1930s Mr. and Mrs. Earl Childs went to Douglas, Ariz., where he took a position with the J. C. Penney Company for a short time, until he decided to move to Tucson, to take a position with the Southern Pacific railroad.

His train service took him between Tucson and Lordsburg, N. Mex., and his liking for the railroad caused him to enlist in the transportation service in the China-India-Burma theater in World War 2. While in service he received training in warehousing and transporting supplies for troops over the entire Asiatic theater action in the Far East.

Mr. and Mrs. Childs have moved to their new home they purchased at 928 Davis boulevard. Walker Childs, the owner, will also be associated here with the new store, and will be spending part of his time looking after his two stores in Cape Girardeau, now being operated by his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Swob.

Tina Marquand Making First Movie Cast

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD AP -- You gaze into those velvety brown eyes and suddenly you are transported back to another film era, when a sleek beauty in a diaphanous harem gown murmured, "I love you" to Turhan Bey.

The eyes are those of Tina Marquand, who is unmistakably like her mother, the late Maria Montez.

By one of those tricks of fate that delight the hearts of interviewers, Tina was making her first Hollywood movie at Universal. At the time of Tina's birth her mother was reigning over the lot as queen of the studio's sex-and-sand epics.

Time inexorably changes things. In 1952, Maria Montez died in Paria of a heart attack in a hot tub. Her old studio has long been transformed from a maker of desert fantasies to an entertainment factory operated by MCA.

Now Tina is 20 and appearing with Dean Martin and Alain Delon in "Texas Across the River." She shuns any of the trappings of her mother, who was one of Hollywood's cheesecake stars of the 1940s.

"Pose for bikini shots? Never!" she declared. "It is so ridiculous, going into a studio gallery and posing with the balloons and the false sand and the blue-paper backing. Ridiculous!"

Tina has seen films of her mother in her heyday. Her appraisal? "She was very beautiful, but very bad as an actress. I don't suppose it was her fault; the films were so ridiculous."

Born in Beverly Hills, Tina left at the age of 3 to live in Paris with her mother and father, Jean Pierre Aumont. After Maria's death, Tina traveled all over the world with him as he appeared in films and on the stage. The exposure convinced her she wanted no part of acting.

Her attitude changed after her marriage to French actor Christian Marquand. She was 17, he was in his mid-30s.

She studied in New York with Stella Adler and Philip Burton, foster father of Richard Burton. Her first role was in "Modesty Blaise," an upcoming film about a female James Bond. Then came a Roger Vadim film in France and "Texas Across the River," in which she plays an Indian girl.

Quick Hollandaise Sauce

⅓ cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Blend mayonnaise, milk, salt and pepper in saucepan. Cook over very low heat, stirring constantly, until heated, about 3 minutes. Stir in lemon juice and rind. Serve over hot asparagus. Makes 1¼ cups.

Fluffy Hollandaise: Follow recipe for Quick Hollandaise Sauce, folding in ¼ cup heavy cream, whipped, with lemon juice and rind.

Cheese Sauce

2 tablespoons margarine
1 tablespoon corn starch
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk
¼ cup finely shredded cheese

Melt margarine in saucepan. Blend in corn starch, salt and pepper. Remove from heat. Gradually add milk, mixing until smooth. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens, comes to boil and boils 1 minute. Mix in cheese, stirring until cheese is melted. Serve over hot asparagus. Makes about 1 cup.

STRATEGIC FOOD

This year, as in 1963, Western free world countries have come to the aid of the communist nations in one of their most vitally critical areas, namely, shortages in food production. In the last four years about 40 million tons of free world wheat have been shipped to communist countries, mainly from Canada and Australia, although the United States also supplied a big tonnage two years ago when the Soviet Union was sorely short of this vital food commodity. Some of the wheat the Russians buy from us and other Western countries is reshipped to Red satellites to satisfy Soviet commitments to sustain their economies.

Now our Commerce Department has issued the first export license in 18 months for shipment of American wheat behind the Iron Curtain. The sale, amounting to $3,470,148, goes to Communist East Germany. This country is the most virulent of Red nations outside Russia itself and Red China in its opposition to the United States. Thus, in shipping wheat to East Germany, we not only are helping one of our opponents in Eastern Europe but are easing the strain on Russia as well.

It isn't necessary to point out to the average citizen (although it may be necessary to call the Commerce Department's attention to it) that East Germany built the Berlin Wall. Nor is it necessary to point out to most Americans that Communists are killing and wounding our men in Vietnam.

Would the Commerce or State Departments sanction shipping guns or bombs or planes or nuclear weapons to East Germany or other communist countries? In the lexicon of Washington, these are classed as "strategic weapons." What is more strategic than food to an enemy that does not have enough of it?

Civilian To Take Over Equador

QUITO, Equador AP -- The armed forces high command announced yesterday it has summoned the nation's political leaders to the Defense Ministry to choose a civilian to take over the government, headed since July 1963 by a military junta.

The announcement came on the heels of student demonstrations in which seven persons have been killed.

The military high command made its announcement in a broadcast, and there were indications it did so without consulting the three-man Junta.

The broadcast said the military chiefs reached their decision to hand power over to a civilian in order to "avoid chaos and anarchy." It added that the new civilian chief will have military support.

Demonstrations broke out again in Guayaquil, Ecuador's second largest city. Army troops lobbed tear gas grenades into knots of demonstrators but no casualties were reported.

About 3,000 demonstrators ranged up and down the city's main commercial street.

A government spokesman indicated the junta will resign if it can agree on a provisional president.

German Rice Croquettes

German Rice Croquettes take a bit of doing but they are well worth the effort. Favorite foods of Germany — sauerkraut and frankfurters — are the basis of the croquettes. Cooked rice, rapidly becoming a staple in the cupboards of modern German homemakers, is one of the basic ingredients, too.

When these three ingredients are blended with eggs, cheese, and seasonings, they are easily shaped into balls or cones for deep fat frying. The crispy croquettes make pleasant eating, accompanied by a zesty mustard sauce, for luncheon or dinner and snack time, too.

Once served, German Rice Croquettes with Mustard Sauce will be requested time and time again not only during 1966, International Rice Year, but in years to come, whenever a typically German dish is in order.

German Rice Croquettes with Mustard Sauce

1 can (16 oz.) sauerkraut
⅓ cup minced onions
½ pound frankfurters
3 eggs
2 cups cooked rice
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons water
1 cup fine dry crumbs
¾ cup salad dressing
½ cup cream
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons prepared mustard

Drain sauerkraut thoroughly, pressing out as much of the juice as possible. Put sauerkraut, onions, and frankfurters through the food grinder using a medium blade. Beat 2 eggs slightly. Add sauerkraut mixture, rice, cheese, salt and pepper; mix thoroughly. Shape into 12 croquettes using about ⅓ cup for each. Combine remaining egg and water; beat slightly. Roll each croquette in crumbs, then dip in egg mixture and roll again in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat (375 degrees F.) until golden brown, about three minutes. To make sauce, combine salad dressing, cream, lemon juice, and mustard. Heat over boiling water. Serve over the hot croquettes.

Makes 6 servings.

Independents Get Large Part of Food Dollar

Affiliated independent grocers by the end of 1962 were attracting 47 per cent of the nation's food dollar, it has been shown.

Corporate chain organizations were receiving 39 per cent of the business and unaffiliated independent stores were getting the remaining 14 per cent of the patronage.

As recently as 1926, when IGA was formed, many conservative business authorities were predicting that it would be only a matter of time before independent grocers would be as extinct as the village blacksmith. Yet today, affiliated independents are the largest single factor in the nation's giant food industry. . . and are growing fast. Latest figures available give the corporate chains an increase in business over the corresponding period of three per cent. . .while independents are up eight per cent.

This has been achieved during a period which has seen the rise of the "big store" in the food business.

The most powerful reason for the success of independent stores in so many communities is the personality of the store owners themselves, who are known and respected in their communities.

PEMISCOT ROAD DANGEROUS

Thirty people died on Pemiscot streets and highways last year.

They joined that vast number who have become the statistics quoted by safety experts.

Each year we kill more and more with our automobiles. We wring our hands--and justifiably so--over our fighting men who died in Vietnam and who have died in other wars. But battle deaths are far, far below the annual death toll on our highways.

The solution would seem to be a more realistic attitude toward automobiles and automobile drivers.

An automobile is a dangerous weapon.

The driver of an automobile is responsible for what the automobile does.

The sooner we realize that bad automobile driving is criminal, the sooner we will stop the carnage on our highways.

Those who cannot and will not drive sane and sensibly must be kept from behind the wheel. If they insist on getting behind the wheel anyway, a jail sentence seems the best answer.

We must stop killing ourselves with our automobiles sooner or later.

Better now while YOU are still alive.

'Voyage To Nowhere'

DOWNEY, Calif. AP --Three men set off yesterday on a "voyage to nowhere" that could be as dangerous as a flight to the moon.

Locked in an 18-foot-diameter dome from which air has been pumped to simulate the vacuum of space, the space-suited trio will spend up to 14 days in a cramped mockup of the Apollo capsule expected to fly to the moon and back by the end of the decade.

They'll have one big advantage over Apollo astronauts: If something goes wrong, they can leave their space environment through an air lock running from the hatch of their capsule to a door in the metal pressure dome.

But while they're inside their lives will depend on an environmental control system regulating air pressure, temperature and humidity.

The three men, Richard Erman, 33; John A. Moyles, 36; and Norman Abell, 37, are pilots turned research engineers at North American Aviation, Inc., builder of Apollo spacecraft.

Each has a "flight plan" for checking the instruments controlling their artificial environment. Like astronauts, their physical condition will be monitored.

Once served, German Rice Croquettes with Mustard Sauce will be requested time and time again not only during 1966, International Rice Year, but in years to come, whenever a typically German dish is in order.

German Rice Croquettes with Mustard Sauce

- 1 can (16 oz.) sauerkraut
- ½ cup minced onions
- ½ pound frankfurters
- 3 eggs
- 2 cups cooked rice
- 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1 cup fine dry crumbs
- ¾ cup salad dressing
- ½ cup cream
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons prepared mustard

Drain sauerkraut thoroughly, pressing out as much of the juice as possible. Put sauerkraut, onions, and frankfurters through the food grinder using a medium blade. Beat 2 eggs slightly. Add sauerkraut mixture, rice, cheese, salt and pepper; mix thoroughly. Shape into 12 croquettes using about ⅓ cup for each. Combine remaining egg and water; beat slightly. Roll each croquette in crumbs, then dip in egg mixture and roll again in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat (375 degrees F.) until golden brown, about three minutes. To make sauce, combine salad dressing, cream, lemon juice, and mustard. Heat over boiling water. Serve over the hot croquettes.

Makes 6 servings.

Bonneville's Salt Flats

Geologists believe that the vast expanse of salty clay known as Utah's Bonneville salt flats is the bed of a great lake, or of several lakes, whose water evaporated long ago.

When snow gets inside our galoshes, and life in general looks bleak, we'll recall that forlorn motorist changing a flat tire along Lindell during rush hour in the snowstorm.

Independents Get Large Part of Food Dollar

Affiliated independent grocers by the end of 1962 were attracting 47 per cent of the nation's food dollar, it has been shown.

Corporate chain organizations were receiving 39 per cent of the business and unaffiliated independent stores were getting the remaining 14 per cent of the patronage.

As recently as 1926, when IGA was formed, many conservative business authorities were predicting that it would be only a matter of time before independent grocers would be as extinct as the village blacksmith. Yet today, affiliated independents are the largest single factor in the nation's giant food industry. . . and are growing fast. Latest figures available give the corporate chains an increase in business over the corresponding period of three per cent. . .whileindependents are up eight per cent.

This has been achieved during a period which has seen the rise of the "big store" in the food business.

The most powerful reason for the success of independent stores in so many communities is the personality of the store owners themselves, who are known and respected in their communities.

DIAL-A-DRINK

A man who runs out of cash at a bar but is in no mood to go home can solve the problem in a trice--if he's Japanese. Tokyo moneylenders have worked out a great system. The strapped barfly puts in a phone call and in a few minutes a loan agent arrives, discreetly hands over a wad of cash and takes a receipt. The loan is repaid in monthly installments, at 3.8 percent interest a month. Drink now, pay later.

PEMISCOT ROAD DANGEROUS

Thirty people died on Pemiscot streets and highways last year.

They joined that vast number who have become the statistics quoted by safety experts.

Each year we kill more and more with our automobiles.

We wring our hands--and justifiably so--over our fighting men who died in Vietnam and who have died in other wars. But battle deaths are far, far below the annual death toll on our highways.

The solution would seem to be a more realistic attitude toward automobiles and automobile drivers.

An automobile is a dangerous weapon.

The driver of an automobile is responsible for what the automobile does.

The sooner we realize that bad automobile driving is criminal, the sooner we will stop the carnage on our highways.

Those who cannot and will not drive sane and sensibly must be kept from behind the wheel. If they insist on getting behind the wheel anyway, a jail sentence seems the best answer.

We must stop killing ourselves with our automobiles sooner or later.

Better now while YOU are still alive.

'Voyage To Nowhere'

DOWNEY, Calif. AP --Three men set off yesterday on a "voyage to nowhere" that could be as dangerous as a flight to the moon.

Locked in an 18-foot-diameter dome from which air has been pumped to simulate the vacuum of space, the space-suited trio will spend up to 14 days in a cramped mockup of the Apollo capsule expected to fly to the moon and back by the end of the decade.

They'll have one big advantage over Apollo astronauts: If something goes wrong, they can leave their space environment through an air lock running from the hatch of their capsule to a door in the metal pressure dome.

But while they're inside their lives will depend on an environmental control system regulating air pressure, temperature and humidity.

The three men, Richard Erman, 33; John A. Moyles, 36; and Norman Abell, 37, are pilots turned research engineers at North American Aviation, Inc., builder of Apollo spacecraft.

Each has a "flight plan" for checking the instruments controlling their artificial environment. Like astronauts, their physical condition will be monitored.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have always thought you were crazy. Now I am sure. What do you mean by telling parents to hide their bodies from their children? Don't you know this is the reason we have so many sex maniacs running around loose? They are the products of ignorant parents who encouraged shame and unsatisfied curiosity.

Not only are you crazy but you are also inconsistent. In your column several months ago you told women they should not hide from their husbands. You said undressing in the closet was wrong. I stood up and cheered for you that time. I said to myself, "That Ann Landers has a good head on her shoulders." And then you let me down when you came out with that foolish theory on seduction. I wish the editor would throw your column out of our paper and print more farm news. -- WISCONSIN READER

Dear Reader: About my "inconsistency": I hope it will come as no surprise to you to learn that the relationship between a parent and a child of the opposite sex is not the same as the relationship between a man and his wife.

And now, I hate to keep you away from your tractor, Zeke, but I hope you'll stick around long enough to read the next letter:

Dear Ann Landers: We are two teen-agers who read your column faithfully. We would like to settle, once and for all, the argument about the mother who undressed before her 12-year-old. The source we present is the Bible.

Leviticus 18: vs 6 part 7: "None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the Lord."

"She is the mother: thou shalt not uncover her nakedness."

We thought you might like to know that God is on your side. Sincerely yours. -- CANADIAN TEENS

Dear Teens: Thanks for your heavenly support, kids. I love you dearly!

Dear Ann Landers: Should my husband go to his daughter's wedding without me? She is his first wife's child and we never got along although I tried my best to tolerate her snippiness. This girl has every one of her mother's bad qualities plus a few of her own. They live in another city and I haven't seen the ex-wife or the daughter for almost four years.

The invitation was addressed to my husband which I consider a slap in the face since he and I have been married for 12 years.

My husband is going to give his daughter in marriage. He will probably act very husbandly toward his ex-wife since she has not remarried. I say he is helping them insult me if he goes to this wedding and leaves me at home. What do you say? -- EXCLUDED

Dear Ex: It has always been a mystery to me that anyone would WANT to go where he is not invited. Some ex-wives get along with the first family and they do get invited. It obbiously doesn't work that way in your family so please have the good sense and the grace to stay home.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Souldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

THE LEGEND OF THE DOGWOOD

There is a legend that at the time of the Crucifixion the dogwood had been the size of the oak and other forest trees. So firm and strong was the tree that it was chosen as the timber for the cross. To be used thus for such a cruel purpose greatly distressed the tree, and Jesus, nailed upon it, sensed this, and in His gentle pity for all sorrow and suffering said to it:

"Because of your regret and pity for My suffering, never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used as a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted, and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross -- two long and two short petals. And in the center of the outer edge of each petal there will be nail prints, brown with rust and stained with red, and in the center of the flower, will be a crown of thorns, and all who see it will remember."

The dogwood inspired David J. Harkness, extension librarian of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, to publish a booklet "The Dogwood in Legend and Literature," and here are excerpts from the pamphlet:

George Washington planted dogwoods at Mount Vernon, and Thomas Jefferson used them in landscaping, both at Monticello and the University of Virginia.

Washington's love for the tree is memorialized at Vally Forge, which has 50,000 growing.

At Shiloh, a soldier wrote: "How white the dogwood bloomed in the dark woods of Shiloh."

From ancient times, legends have clustered around the tree. On Mount Ida in Greece, it grew in the grove sacred to Apollo, and it was believed that the god was angered by impious cutting of these trees to make part of the lumber for the Trojan Horse.

There is a tale in mythology to the effect that the dogwood's snowy blossoms date from the spring day when Pierrot, climbing a ladder to brigten up the moon's face with whitewash, tipped his bucket high in the sky and spattered trees below with its contents.

An American Indian legend tells that a beautiful Cherokee princess was slain by a jealous brave, whose suit she had rejected. The maiden picked up a dogwood blossom and used it to soak up her blood as she died. This, the story says, is why there are the red spots on each petal.

Of filigreed hillsides in spring, Donald Culross Peattie wrote: "Like brides and bridesmaids the dogwoods line our roadsides, upholding on slim bare arms their sprays of starry bloom."

Henry David Thoreau said blossoming dogwood "is like a flock of white birds passing."

Irving S. Cobb, the Kentucky humorist and story writer, instructed his survivors: "Lay my ashes at the roots of a dogwood tree in Paducah at the proper planting time. Should the tree live, that will be monument enough for me."

The late John Gould Fletcher, Arkansas Pulitzer prize-winning poet, in a poem entitled "Dogwood," wrote:

Like a girl holding, spread
Stiff skirts, a ruffled dancer,
Pale-white, poised in the shadow of the trees;

Like a shy flight of stars
In between gray-brown tree trunks,
Fluttering in loose bands,
Not yet settled to earth;

Like late snow,
After the winter has ended,
Flakes falling, caught, and held
In some unearthly swirl.

Jesse Stuart wrote:

In clouds of dogwood blossoms on the slopes,
Enchanted time when blooms reach for the sky
And fill us with invigorating hopes.

From the pen of A. E. Housman came:

Loveliest of trees, the dogwood now
Is hung with bloom along the bough,
And stands about the woodland ride,
Wearing white at Eastertide.

MISSOURIANS WANT THEIR BATTLESHIP BUT NAVY KEEPING HER IN RESERVE

Interest of Missourians in establishing their battleship, the MISSOURI, as a permanent memorial, preferably in Missouri, remains high despite the Navy's continued retention of the ship in the Reserve Fleet.

One of the most recent inquiries as to whether the MISSOURI could be moved up the Mississippi River to St. Louis was from Art Wallhausen, editor of the Charleston, Mo., Enterprise - Courier. He proposed, if that is impossible, that the ship be brought as far as the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi to a position on the Missouri side of the River commanding that view. Others, including members of the State Legislature from time to time, have suggested she be moved up the Missouri River and located at Jefferson City.

Many coastal states also have bid for the permanent home of the MISSOURI, particularly because of her historic role as the surrender ship of World War II. The Japanese surrender document was signed aboard the MISSOURI in Tokyo Bay, September 2, 1945.

The Navy, however, is not yet ready to cede her from the Reserve Fleet. A report, received this past week from Rear Admiral Edward J. Fahy, Chief, Bureau of Ships, states "interest in preserving the battleship MISSOURI as a permanent memorial is appreciated. However, the Navy has no present plans to dispose of the battleship MISSOURI or her three sister ships which are in the Reserve Fleet."

Of 23 battleships in the United States Navy at the close of World War II, only four are still on standby in the reserves -- the MISSOURI, IOWA, WISCONSIN, and NEW JERSEY. Most famous of the great ships, the MISSOURI was the last used in action in the Korean conflict and was decommissioned from the active fleet in 1955.

Since then, she has had thousands of visitors each year to the surrender deck while in berth at Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Washington.

The Navy has offered whatever assistance they can give toward placing the MISSOURI in a memorial location when they determine that she will not be needed for further service. But as they have pointed out, the size of the 45,000-ton ship would present tremendous problems on a move up the Mississippi River. Her draft requires a channel 30 feet in depth--compared to the nine - foot channel in the Mississippi River above Baton Rouge and in the Missouri River between St. Louis and Jefferson City. A bridge clearance of 65 feet above high water at Baton Rouge would require cutting off and reinstalling about 100 feet of the MISSOURI's superstructure. This includes two 50-ton funnels, two 20-ton gun directors, and the 600-ton conning tower.

Dancer Accused Of Murder

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. AP -- A young St. Joseph man was shot and killed early yesterday and a night club go-go dancer was arrested on a first degree murder warrant.

Ronnie Todd, 24, was killed by a bullet through his heart as he sat in a car on a parking lot.

Alice Powers, 33, who lives at Stanberry, was taken into custody today at that city northeast of here.

The Gentry County sheriff, Everett Bowman, said Miss Powers told authorities Todd and four other St. Joseph young men followed her car to the parking lot at a shopping center. With Miss Powers in her car were two other dancers from Bodde's Mirror, a night spot.

Sheriff Bowman said Miss Powers claimed that she had been annoyed and that she got out of her car and shot into the air several times with a 22 caliber pistol.

Miss Powers then drove the other dancers. Bernice Dieter, 23, and Lela May Griffin, 18, to their homes.

Authorities continued to question the principals.

Thomas L. Duty, Buchanan County prosecutor, obtained the murder warrant. He and Verne V. Starmer, St. Joseph chief of detectives, said they were told that Miss Powers had threatened to shoot Rolland Atkins, 22, and John Baker, 24, both of St. Joseph. Baker drove the automobile in which Todd, a married man, was killed.

Change The Usual Meat Dish To A Special Chef's Salad

A welcome change from the usual meat dish is a main course consisting of a hearty salad. Make a Chef's Special Salad with delicious flavor that comes from crushed cheese-flavored crackers. You'll also need chicory, escarole, Boston lettuce, tomatoes and garlic. Splash on a white wine and oil dressing, and toss. Serve with a plate of crackers and an iced beverage. Here's how:

Special Chef's Salad

- 1 cup coarsely broken Sunshine Cheez-It Crackers
- 1 egg
- ⅓ cup salad oil
- 3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ medium head chicory
- ½ medium head escarole
- ½ medium head Boston lettuce
- 3 medium tomatoes
- 1 clove garlic, peeled and cut

Break crackers and set aside. Beat egg well and mix with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper; set aside. Wash greens and dry well, discarding any bad leaves and heavy spines. Cut tomatoes into quarters, discard stem ends and seeds. Cut remaining tomato shells into slivers. Rub large bowl with garlic. Sprinkle with tomato slivers and broken crackers. Shake dressing well and pour over salad. Toss until greens are well covered with dressing Yield: 6 servings.

IGA Led Way in Food Retailing Practices

The Independent Grocers Association, since its inception in 1926, has established itself as a leader in the pioneering of modern food retailing methods. Many of the practices introduced by IGA are regarded today as milestones in the progress of the industry.

For example, IGA was the first to establish a store engineering department in the modern meaning of the term. IGA pioneered the concept that a retailer could control what happened at the cash registers by the layout of his selling area.

The grocers organization was the first to inaugurate self-service on a large scale. It began in a few test stores when shoppers were handed large baskets and invited to help themselves. Many customers resented the idea considering it an affront to their dignity. Yet, IGA retailers persisted, explaining the economies that self-service would permit. The modern supermarket is the direct result of their pioneering efforts.

Store engineers of IGA were the first to handle store layout in terms of a scientific analysis of customer shopping patterns. The first designed Foodliner introduced a departmentalization based on traffic flow which is today basic in the design of every supermarket.

IGA was also the first among all voluntary food chains to reach coast-to-coast proportions in its operations. It was also the first to launch a national advertising program in behalf of a group of independent grocers. (Today, IGA is the largest retail food user of newspaper space in the world, placing ads regularly in more than 2,800 newspapers.)

IGA was the first to sponsor TV broadcasts to originate in a supermarket. (This was in Chicago in 1948).

And, IGA was the first independent group to consider and install prepackaged meats, fresh fruits and vegetables on a 100 per cent basis.

WHEN WILL THEY LEARN?

America is a nation on wheels. When will the driving public learn that seat belts are made to be used, not sat on?

The death of a motorist in a one-car crash on St. Charles Rock road Wednesday brought to a grisly total of 11 the number of county traffic deaths since the first of the year, as compared to two in the same period a year ago.

Alcohol was a probable factor in some of these fatalities, but lack of seat belts seemed a factor in all.

In another county accident last weekend, a 3-year-old boy was hurt critically when hurled against the dashboard and windshield in a three-car smashup. Eighty-three per cent of severe or fatal auto deaths are caused by such impact.

Nearly 1300 persons killed on the nation's highways over the Christmas and New Year's week-ends would be alive now if they had worn their seat belts, the Automobile Club reports.

Auto seat belts can save more lives on short runs than on long trips, since three-fourths of all traffic deaths occur within 25 miles of the victim's home.

All new cars sold in recent years are equipped with seat belts at the factory. Is the few seconds' effort required to fasten the safety belt too big a price to pay for saving a human life? Yours?

Ladies' Day at the Turkish bath in larger American cities was a weekly institution that used to send titillating thoughts through the minds of our grandfathers, who could only imagine what one must look like. It also used to send titillating thoughts, five centuries ago, through the mind of a Turkish sultan, who did something about it. In a Constantinople bath, Mahmoud II made a private arrangement. On Ladies' Day, he sat concealed behind a latticed window looking down into the hall. The women entered, wearing the customary loose chemises supplied as bath garments--which had been gimmicked by having stitches removed and seams glued. In the humid heat, the glue dissolved, the chemises fell off...and the sultan was pleasantly entertained.

Shortly after the Korean War one of our larger carriers was conducting some much needed gunnery practice. The target drone pilot, a salty lieutenant, was becoming exasperated as the shells consistently went wide of the mark.

The ship repeatedly radioed the pilot to bring the drone closer and lower until it was within rock-throwing range. When the disgusted pilot got a final call for closer and lower, he exploded. "All right! Clear the flight deck! I'm gonna' land this S.O.B. aboard and you can beat it to death with your swabs!"

ANOTHER TERMINAL DECLINES

When the Burlington's Sam Houston Zephyr ended its service between Dallas and Houston a few days ago it left the three-story Union Terminal in Dallas in sad state. The big facility, opened in 1916 with elaborate ceremonies, at one time handled about 100 arrivals and departures of passenger trains a day. It is now down to 14 such daily events and is reported to be up for sale.

The explanations offered by officials of the terminal company for the difficulties are familiar ones and were heard in Memphis some while ago when our Union Station was abandoned. In Dallas it was said that the Government started taking away mail contracts from the railroads in 1952 and passengers were lost in steadily increasing numbers to automobiles, buses and airplanes. In the meantime, union pay scales rose without a halt.

The reasons given for the evil days for the lines are not the only ones, especially if you are willing to listen to other elements affected, but they are potent. What happens now in Dallas is not certain. The station is reported to have been offered for sale to the Post Office Department. Another suggestion is that the terminal might be turned into a transportation center with buses using most of it and trains handling what little passenger business might be left in the same old spot.

As passenger traffic dwindles for the railroads in numerous places, there is a great deal of talk and some action designed to bring rail travel back to ease the problems posed by too many automotive vehicles to be handled properly be freeways and the like. It is not alarmist to think that the future of many great cities depends on ability to solve the puzzle.

PASTE-POT LAW

It has come as a surprise to a good many elderly persons eligible to apply for medical benefits under the Medicare program that they will be asked a question about Communist affiliation. And, indeed, this provision in the new law comes as a surprise to Congressmen who voted for it, including Senator Jacob Javits, one of Medicare's sponsors.

The law says that anyone not covered by Social Security or railroad retirement insurance is ineligible for hospital and nursing home benefits if he is a member of an organization required to register with the subversive Activities Control Board. To enforce the provision, the Health, Education and Welfare Department is asking many of the elderly the following questions: "Are you now or have you during the last 12 months been a member of any organization which is required to register under the Internal Security Act of 1950 as a Communist action organization, a Communist front organization, or a Communist infiltrated organization?"

The most logical explanation for this situation seems to be, as Mr. Javits suggests, that the Communist-inquiry clause was included when bits and pieces of earlier medical care proposals were hastily tacked together in paste-pot fashion to make up the final draft. The New York Senator adds that since Congress never intended to make the elderly sign any such disclaimer he will move for the clause's repeal at the next session.

All the confusion may seem amusing. What isn't at all funny is that such sweeping social legislation could be pieced together and passed without the legislators even knowing what it said.

No Talk From First Lady

WASHINGTON AP -- Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson is ill with viral laryngitis and will delay for two days her scheduled trip to Texas, the White House announced today.

She had been scheduled to fly to Austin tonight, starting a week-long Texas visit.

Mrs. Johnson's press secretary, Elizabeth Carpenter, said doctors expect that two days of rest and medication will put Mrs. Johnson back in shape by Friday to tour the Big Bend National Park.

Mrs. Johnson will have to cancel and postpone the Austin and Johnson City segments of her visits to San Antonio and the Big Bend country will remain.

Chaney Joins P.J. Staff

Phil Chaney, 34, 240 Murray Lane, has joined the P. J.'s Car Service staff.

He has recently received his diploma from Hunter Engineering Company.

He and his wife, Doris, have two children.

Breakfast For Young Sports

Start your youngsters on the day's adventures with a bowl of the new Post Honeycomb Cereal. Even after the milk has been poured into the bowl, the cereal will be crunchy, because its unique shape has more "edges" for extra crispness.

For those who fancy fruit on cereal, here's an extra good way to serve the new crisp corn cereal. Combine 2 cups of chilled milk, 1 tablespoon of strawberry flavor gelatin, and 1 cup of sweetened sliced peaches or strawberries or 2 bananas, cut in small pieces. Mix with a rotary beater, blender, or electric mixer until well blended. Pour over the cereal and top with additional fruit, if desired.

The young set will especially relish this breakfast drink to accompany their new cereal treat.

Deluxe Nog

1 tablespoon orange-flavored instant breakfast drink
1 cup cold milk
1 egg
Ground nutmeg (optional)

Combine instant breakfast drink, milk, and egg. Beat with rotary beater or in an electric blender until well blended. Pour into 1 large glass or 2 small glasses. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Makes about 1¼ cups or 1 large or 2 small servings.

EVENING SPLENDOR—Swirls of brilliant pink on white cotton ottoman create an elegant look for evening. Worn by Maid of Cotton Nancy Bernard, the Rappi design has an easy silhouette which flares out at the hemline from bow-trimmed godets. Complete with matching stole.

New Problem In Re-Districting

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, yesterday posed a new problem for Missouri's House Redistricting Commission--keeping the haves and have-nots segregated.

Appearing before the commission in its second day of hearings prior to filing the final plan for the 163 new districts, Howard said it would be difficult to represent his new district.

He said it combines segments of the poor and middle classes.

Howard's present district is a poor one, he said. Most of the people rely on welfare and few make over $3,000 a year.

He urged the commission to make his district predominantly "one way or the other."

Rep. Frank Wells, D-Johnson County, submitted a map which would leave his county intact. The lower third of Johnson County was combined with Henry and part of Cass County.

Wells said he didn't know the commission held hearings earlier or he would have submitted the map before.

Rep. Marvel G. Gosser, R-Schuyler County, appealed to the commission to restore a township attached to another district.

Chairman G. Andy Runge, district containing most of district contaning most of Schuyler county already is one of the most populated in the tentative plan.

The commission has until Saturday to make adjustments and file its final plan. Few changes are expected.

A BIRD REMEDY?

Oftentimes the most simple of solutions is the answer to the most complicated of problems.

And perhaps Fire Chief Leslie McMunn has found a solution-temporary at least-to the everlasting bird problem in Dexter.

His solution-noise and flashing lights. Each evening the fire truck, with its new weird-sounding siren, visits the bird roost at about dusk. The siren whines and moans.

The birds don't like it. They leave!

A few go to a wooded area west of the big bird roost, McMunn says. But others have evidently "moved" to other spots, away from Dexter, or so the Chief believes.

Naturally, all the results aren't in as yet in this experiment. But the outlook is good-or at least better than any results from any of the attempts so far!

It seems that birds simply cannot stand the noise, and the flashing lights.

Will they come back? Nobody knows.

But wouldn't it be nice if this simple, inexpensive experiment really worked, and would move the birds to some other area.

A few birds have remained, despite the noise. Perhaps they are deaf. But other--thousands of them--have left, at least temporarily.

Perhaps they, like thousands of humans, are merely seeking peace and quiet. And if peace and quiet is what they are seeking, then give them noise, boys, and plenty of it!

DEFICIT UPS AND DOWNS — The odds are heavily against President Johnson's having hit it on the nose with his fiscal 1967 budget estimate forecasting a deficit of $1.8 billion. In each of the past 10 years, the actual final balance was off the preliminary estimate by anywhere from $1 billion to almost $13 billion. Six times the deficit was greater than anticipated or an estimated surplus turned out to be a deficit. Four times the final balance was better than had been estimated.

Mr. C's Kitchen Dispenses Meals Ready-To-Eat For Weary Wives

A boon to working wives and a needed service to customers in general was the way Walker G. Childs, Cape Girardeau grocer, viewed the launching of a delicatessen at his store.

Mr. Childs is the owner and operator of Childs IGA Foodliner in Cape Girardeau.

"I wanted to offer my customers a needed service. With Cape Girardeau pushing 25,000 population, I'd say about three fourths of the women are employed.

"Our city needed a good delicatessen -- not the salami sandwich, dab of salad-on-wilted-lettuce type thing -- but a department where customers could select a good dinner, home cooked and neatly packaged.

"Or they might pick up a smaller portion lunch or snack. I figured home-baked bread, pies, cakes and hot foods were fine drawing cards."

Thus Mr. Childs declared his prospectus for the delicatessen venture.

Enlarged and remodeled four times in its three-year history, "Mr. C's Kitchen," as it came to be known, grew from a hot plate and a freezer-top worktable run by a single employe, Mrs. Guilford Jones, to a fully equipped, 50 x 25 foot food preparation center requiring the services of 11 full-time and two part-time cooks, bakers, clerks.

Faithful adherence to quality and a continuing emphasis on variety has been the formula for success at Childs'. They offer six meat dishes, besides barcues; nine hot vegetables, and 15 to 18 salads. In addition, they bake numerous breads, cakes, and pies.

Certain rules, followed since the department's inception, amount almost to trade secrets for a prosperous delicatessen:

(a) Cook in small quantities. Mashed potatoes are prepared in two-quart pans; and many small batches are made during the day. Waste is kept to a minimum.

(b) Use no mixes and make no substitutions. (If butter is called for, use butter.)

(c) Taste everything for quality.

(d) Use only fresh or fresh-frozen fruits and vegetables in pies or hot dishes.

What elements made "Mr. C's Kitchen" click from the beginning?

(1) The town needed a good delicatessen.

(2) Good location.

(3) Courteous help.

(4) Continued excellence of the food.

The kitchen manager, Mrs. Jones, clips magazines for new food ideas. Customers contribute others. All are taste-tested by the staff before being offered for sale.

At Childs', the menus are varied and follow the seasons. Popular during the winter are chicken and dumplings with mashed potatoes. In the spring, "country-cooked" ham hock and beans with mixed greens leads the list.

Ordinarily, the same quantities are prepared each day with the exception of Saturday, when the amounts are doubled. On Saturday, cooking begins about 5 a.m. and continues all day as small portions are readied to replace low stocks.

The Christmas season is a particularly busy period of the year for "Mr. C's Kitchen" as requests for catered parties come pouring in. Last holiday season, the kitchen prepared meals for groups of 100 to 300 persons, plus handling regular business. The largest gathering served by the kitchen was for the opening of Wetterau Grocer Company of Scott City, the IGA supply depot for parts of five states, and involved feeding about 2,500 people.

Perhaps the philosophy behind the continued operation of the kitchen is best explained by Walker Childs when he says: "No working woman wants to make a half-dozen stops on her way home. Here, she can pick up tonight's supper, the makings of tomorrow's lunch, and study the weekend spencials--so why not go ahead and buy for the weekend? And she does just that."

In the new 16,000-square-foot Mr. "C's" Foodliner, another first for the Cape Girardeau area was planned by Mr. Childs. It features an 18-stool lunch counter with its large delicatessen.

The two stores will work in conjunction. The old delicatessen will still do the major portion of hot food preparation and baking; with a station wagon commuting between the two establishments.

"I couldn't be thinking of a new store in Sikeston, unless we had made a success here," Mr. Childs declares, adding: "As a drawing card, I'd say the kitchen has paid off! Our regular customers continue to patronize us, and we have gained many new ones."

(The foregoing news article, in part, was published in "Food Merchandising," a national trade magazine, in July of 1963. Through the years, the sales promotions and customers' services offered by Walker Childs have been widely recognized and acclaimed.)

(4) Continued excellence of the food.

The kitchen manager, Mrs. Jones, clips magazines for new food ideas. Customers contribute others. All are taste-tested by the staff before being offered for sale.

At Childs', the menus are varied and follow the seasons. Popular during the winter are chicken and dumplings with mashed potatoes. In the spring, "country-cooked" ham hock and beans with mixed greens leads the list.

Ordinarily, the same quantities are prepared each day with the exception of Saturday, when the amounts are doubled. On Saturday, cooking begins about 5 a.m. and continues all day as small portions are readied to replace low stocks.

The Christmas season is a particularly busy period of the year for "Mr. C's Kitchen" as requests for catered parties come pouring in. Last holiday season, the kitchen prepared meals for groups of 100 to 300 persons, plus handling regular business. The largest gathering served by the kitchen was for the opening of Wetterau Grocer Company of Scott City, the IGA supply depot for parts of five states, and involved feeding about 2,500 people.

Perhaps the philosophy behind the continued operation of the kitchen is best explained by Walker Childs when he says: "No working woman wants to make a half-dozen stops on her way home. Here, she can pick up tonight's supper, the makings of tomorrow's lunch, and study the weekend spencials--so why not go ahead and buy for the weekend? And she does just that."

In the new 16,000-square-foot Mr. "C's" Foodliner, another first for the Cape Girardeau area was planned by Mr. Childs. It features an 18-stool lunch counter with its large delicatessen.

The two stores will work in conjunction. The old delicatessen will still do the major portion of hot food preparation and baking; with a station wagon commuting between the two establishments.

"I couldn't be thinking of a new store in Sikeston, unless we had made a success here," Mr. Childs declares, adding: "As a drawing card, I'd say the kitchen has paid off! Our regular customers continue to patronize us, and we have gained many new ones."

(The foregoing news article, in part, was published in "Food Merchandising," a national trade magazine, in July of 1963. Through the years, the sales promotions and customers' services offered by Walker Childs have been widely recognized and acclaimed.)

New Problem In Re-Districting

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, yesterday posed a new problem for Missouri's House Redistricting Commission--keeping the haves and have-nots segregated.

Appearing before the commission in its second day of hearings prior to filing the final plan for the 163 new districts, Howard said it would be difficult to represent his new district.

He said it combines segments of the poor and middle classes.

Howard's present district is a poor one, he said. Most of the people rely on welfare and few make over $3,000 a year.

He urged the commission to make his district predominantly "one way or the other."

Rep. Frank Wells, D-Johnson County, submitted a map which would leave his county intact. The lower third of Johnson County was combined with Henry and part of Cass County.

Wells said he didn't know the commission held hearings earlier or he would have submitted the map before.

Rep. Marvel G. Gosser, R-Schuyler County, appealed to the commission to restore a township attached to another district.

Chairman G. Andy Runge, district containing most of district contaning most of Schuyler county already is one of the most populated in the tentative plan.

The commission has until Saturday to make adjustments and file its final plan. Few changes are expected.

A BIRD REMEDY?

Oftentimes the most simple of solutions is the answer to the most complicated of problems.

And perhaps Fire Chief Leslie McMunn has found a solution-temporary at least-to the everlasting bird problem in Dexter.

His solution-noise and flashing lights. Each evening the fire truck, with its new weird-sounding siren, visits the bird roost at about dusk. The siren whines and moans.

The birds don't like it. They leave!

A few go to a wooded area west of the big bird roost, McMunn says. But others have evidently "moved" to other spots, away from Dexter, or so the Chief believes.

Naturally, all the results aren't in as yet in this experiment. But the outlook is good-or at least better than any results from any of the attempts so far!

It seems that birds simply cannot stand the noise, and the flashing lights.

Will they come back? Nobody knows.

But wouldn't it be nice if this simple, inexpensive experiment really worked, and would move the birds to some other area.

A few birds have remained, despite the noise. Perhaps they are deaf. But other--thousands of them--have left, at least temporarily.

Perhaps they, like thousands of humans, are merely seeking peace and quiet. And if peace and quiet is what they are seeking, then give them noise, boys, and plenty of it!

DEFICIT UPS AND DOWNS — The odds are heavily against President Johnson's having hit it on the nose with his fiscal 1967 budget estimate forecasting a deficit of $1.8 billion. In each of the past 10 years, the actual final balance was off the preliminary estimate by anywhere from $1 billion to almost $13 billion. Six times the deficit was greater than anticipated or an estimated surplus turned out to be a deficit. Four times the final balance was better than had been estimated.

Water Planter

"The Little Boy with a Jug" keeps things green near the front of the store.

When Childs Opened In Town Plaza

The 16,000-square-foot building at the Town Plaza Shopping Center houses "Mr. C's IGA Foodliner" and is a companion store to Childs IGA Foodliner at 1736 Broadway.

The Broadway store's opening in 1950 had its seeds in the vicious tornado of May 21, 1949, which devastated large sections of Cape Girardeau including Mr. Child's original store at 514 Emerald.

Mr. Childs, the son of a Cape Girardeau policeman, became a grocer on Oct. 31, 1931, when he opened the doors of the little Emerald street building which until the tornado struck served as the Childs' business place and residence.

"I got up at 5 that morning and took in $1.50 all that day," Mr. Childs recalls.

He also remembered that he went into business with $150 cash and some credit. With the cash he bought some used fixtures.

His new store at the shopping center represents an investment of from $400,000 to $450,000.

The original building on Emerald had two rooms; one was the store and the other served as the residence of the Childs.

Mr. Childs said the building had been vacant until he occupied it but that it was a former store building.

The proprietor of the new market rented the building for two years and then bought the premises. Later, he expanded the store and added a wing to the side as his family's dwelling.

Shortly before the tornado, Mr. Childs converted the store to a self service arrangement, making it one of the first neighborhood markets in Cape Girardeau to have that facility, he said.

During the first four years of the Emerald street grocery's operation, Mr. Childs continued to work at the International Shoe Co. where he had been employed for a number of years.

Mr. Child's before owning his own store, also had worked part time in other markets.

The grocer was born in Cape Girardeau in 1906. His father, Patrolman Curtis L. Childs, was a member of the Cape Girardeau police force for 32 years until his death in 1948.

Patrolman Childs had served with the police department here longer than any other man.

The tornado which struck down the little neighborhood grocery did not injure anyone in the building.

"When we saw it take the roof off Rush Limbaugh's house (on Henderson) my wife, and I and the man who worked for us went to the basement," the grocer recalls.

He was out of business for nearly a year before opening the Broadway store the next March.

Mr. Childs said he had been considering going to a larger store and said he had been looking at the Broadway site for some time.

"We knew the trend was toward the cash-and-carry supermarkets. As a neighborhood grocery, we did a lot of credit business," Mr. Childs said.

He commented that many persons thought he was foolish for building the new store as far west in the city as he did.

A major expansion effort came six years after the 1950 opening with the market being enlarged by 30-by-46 feet.

Then Mr. Childs introduced the delicatessen which through expansion three times since has grown to be an important part of the Broadway business.

The delicatessen from which hot ready-to-eat meals are dispensed started as a rotisserie for barbecueing chicken in the meat department. It now requires 13 employes.

With the opening of the new store on Broadway, Mr. Childs became associated with the Independent Grocers Association.

Through this association, the Childs stores are among the many IGA stores in southeast Missouri and parts of Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee to be supplied from the Wetterau Grocery Co., which has its regional warehouse in Scott City.

The Wetterau-IGA relationship is part of the overall affiliatory organization.

Besides groceries, Wetterau supplies other services to the IGA retailers such as advertising, promotion, engineering and accounting.

In charge of the servicing of the Childs store since it opened in 1950 is G. H. Creglow who is the Wetterau grocery supervisor for 25 IGA stores in this area.

Mr. Child's merchandizing techniques through the years has won him recognition on a number of occasions. In 1956, he won a new automobile for the best display of a flour company's product and two years later won a prize for having the best display of a soup company's products.

Mr. Childs said he has attempted to modernize his stores each year and to keep abreast with the latest in merchandizing practices.

Mr. Childs is a member of the Grace Methodist Church and the Rotary Club.

Travel Tax Complexion

by Helen Hennessy
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Constant stay-at-homes are difficult to find these days. Winter vacations are more common and so are weekend trips to visit family, friends or resort areas. Everything is less harried for the woman who plans her cosmetic and clothing needs in advance and packs them well. Select lightweight, nonbreakable plastic containers for beauty aids and pack in a small carrying case. Avoid wrinkled clothing by folding dresses in tissue paper. Take less instead of more clothes—an assortment of drip-drys, knits, mix-and-match outfits, a fold-up raincoat and hood and comfortable shoes. Such a wardrobe can go in one suitcase.

From New Year's Day until after income taxes are paid the secret urge is to pack up and fly away to a new environment. Not all can indulge this desire. Some can and do while the rest of us keep amused jotting down our wishes and needs in preparation for vacation time.

Whether you leave tomorrow or in July, one of your first concerns will be selecting a suitable wardrobe and packing it well. Another concern is keeping your complexion under control. Airline stewardesses who fly through many time zones in their assignments prove a good source for tips on complexion care. American's stewardesses for example, make this point: Most complexions don't care for traveling because travel means change and complexions have a negative reaction to unfamiliar water and climates.

The stewardesses keep their complexion under control by following basic home complexion care. This includes drinking plenty of water, eating green and leafy vegetables, citrus fruits and dairy products and exercising.

They also point out that:

- Travel time is no time to try anything new for the skin.
- Use your favorite astringent or freshener to help keep your skin in balance and use your own special cleanser throughout the trip before washing with soap and water.
- In a soft water area, make sure to remove all soap. And take your own soap to help your skin survive the water change.
- Pamper your skin with a creamy, moisture lotion.
- Avoid fatty foods, rich desserts and an overdose of seafoods while traveling.

When packing look to your slim cosmetic case for comfort and complexion help. There are many small items to take, such as a manicure kit, a needle and thread and pins. Before each trip, make a list of toiletry needs and try to pack them in lightweight, nonbreakable plastic containers. Fill plastic containers no higher than three-quarters.

Wherever you go, you will want to include sunglasses and a squeeze bottle of eye lotion to relieve eye fatigue.

Beef: The Busy-Day Budget-Way

When budget-minded ground beef is coupled with staples from the cupboard, high fashion beef stroganoff comes off the quick and easy way. Canned tomato paste and beef consommé are instant flavor partners for the sauce, while evaporated milk blends the whole to the desired rich creaminess. As the savory beef mixture simmers in the skillet, noodles can be cooked to complete the dish.

Quick Beef Stroganoff

- ¼ cup butter
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- ⅓ cup flour
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
- 1 can (10½ oz.) beef consommé
- 1 cup evaporated milk

Melt butter in a large skillet. Add onion, green pepper and ground beef. Fry over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until meat is browned and onions are tender. Remove from heat. Sprinkle in flour, a little at a time, blending well after each addition. Add salt, pepper, garlic powder and Worcestershire sauce; stir to blend well. Slowly stir in tomato paste, consommé and evaporated milk. Cover skillet and simmer over low heat until thickened slightly, about 15 to 20 minutes. Serve over hot cooked noodles. Makes 6 servings.

AN EXPLANATION IS DUE

Most Missourians, and Americans as well, have assumed that when the presidential-ordered bombings in North Viet Nam have resumed, some logical selection of targets would be made.

Out state's senior U.S. Senator, Stuart Symington, again pointed out this week that our targets in North Viet Nam in recent days have included such "vital" installations as buses and empty barracks. Just why such useless targets are being elected is beyond comprehension.

In our view, if the U. S. is to bomb North Viet Nam with any hope of securing our military and political objectives, we must select normal and obvious military targets. We must, in a word, attack North Vietnamese power stations, petroleum dumps and docks and harbors if we are to achieve any degree of efficiency and effectiveness with our air superiority.

We agree with Senator Symington that selecting the proper military targets in no way escalates the U. S. effort in Viet Nam. Instead, basing targets on strategic effectiveness assures our efforts will not have to be increased.

Our state's senior Senator bases his information on a study of actual conditions in Viet Nam and upon a qualified study of our selected targets of communist installations. He is well qualified to do so, serving as the nation's first Secretary of the Air Force.

The American people, who are asked to support this nation's war effort in Viet Nam on mere faith alone, deserve an explanation of the present policy that seems determined to make our air effort ineffective and of little military consequence.

Surely there is an answer. But at the moment, we're unable to anticipate what it could be.

There was an era of gloom. But into the crises stepped, of all things, the government's Agricultural Research Service. The world brightened.

ARS scientists came up with a process for removing about two-thirds of the oil and calories from peanuts. The processed product still has the shape, flavor and aroma of ordinary roasted peanuts, plus a tremendous appeal to the calory-counter. Those, if any, who still prefer to chomp celery can of course do so.

This is just one of the scores marked up during the last year by research. Along the same diet line was the development of a low-fat cheese made of skim milk. It looks and tastes like very mild Cheddar but contains only 5 to 7 per cent butterfat compared with Cheddar's 31 per cent.

Agricultural research in 1965 was good to the consumer. Scientists continue to add to the list of convenience foods that save time and work. Dry apple flakes for "instant" use were developed; instant sweet potato flakes found themselves being produced commercially be several firms and will probably be appearing in more and more stores. Rice products and wheat products felt the magic touch, too.

Agricultural research did not stop with foods, but moved into fabrics as well. Among such developments was stretch cotton lace, made by an adaptation of the slack mercerization previously perfected by ARS scientists and now being used to make a variety of other all-cotton stretch fabrics. Lace is woven in the usual way and then treated with a solution that makes the fibers swell and crimp to give the lace stretchability. The field here is fitted slips, foundation garments, and lounging and sleeping apparel.

Research gained many goals in 1965. Enough, at any rate, to show us that research is not a far-away something, but is a modern factor that more and more affects our daily lives.

When Childs Opened In Town Plaza

The 16,000-square-foot building at the Town Plaza Shopping Center houses "Mr. C's IGA Foodliner" and is a companion store to Childs IGA Foodliner at 1736 Broadway.

The Broadway store's opening in 1950 had its seeds in the vicious tornado of May 21, 1949, which devastated large sections of Cape Girardeau including Mr. Child's original store at 514 Emerald.

Mr. Childs, the son of a Cape Girardeau policeman, became a grocer on Oct. 31, 1931, when he opened the doors of the little Emerald street building which until the tornado struck served as the Childs' business place and residence.

"I got up at 5 that morning and took in $1.50 all that day," Mr. Childs recalls.

He also remembered that he went into business with $150 cash and some credit. With the cash he bought some used fixtures.

His new store at the shopping center represents an investment of from $400,000 to $450,000.

The original building on Emerald had two rooms; one was the store and the other served as the residence of the Childs.

Mr. Childs said the building had been vacant until he occupied it but that it was a former store building.

The proprietor of the new market rented the building for two years and then bought the premises. Later, he expanded the store and added a wing to the side as his family's dwelling.

Shortly before the tornado, Mr. Childs converted the store to a self service arrangement, making it one of the first neighborhood markets in Cape Girardeau to have that facility, he said.

During the first four years of the Emerald street grocery's operation, Mr. Childs continued to work at the International Shoe Co. where he had been employed for a number of years.

Mr. Child's before owning his own store, also had worked part time in other markets.

The grocer was born in Cape Girardeau in 1906. His father, Patrolman Curtis L. Childs, was a member of the Cape Girardeau police force for 32 years until his death in 1948.

Patrolman Childs had served with the police department here longer than any other man.

The tornado which struck down the little neighborhood grocery did not injure anyone in the building.

"When we saw it take the roof off Rush Limbaugh's house (on Henderson) my wife, and I and the man who worked for us went to the basement," the grocer recalls.

He was out of business for nearly a year before opening the Broadway store the next March.

Mr. Childs said he had been considering going to a larger store and said he had been looking at the Broadway site for some time.

"We knew the trend was toward the cash-and-carry supermarkets. As a neighborhood grocery, we did a lot of credit business," Mr. Childs said.

He commented that many persons thought he was foolish for building the new store as far west in the city as he did.

A major expansion effort came six years after the 1950 opening with the market being enlarged by 30-by-46 feet.

Then Mr. Childs introduced the delicatessen which through expansion three times since has grown to be an important part of the Broadway business.

The delicatessen from which hot ready-to-eat meals are dispensed started as a rotisserie for barbecueing chicken in the meat department. It now requires 13 employes.

With the opening of the new store on Broadway, Mr. Childs became associated with the Independent Grocers Association.

Through this association, the Childs stores are among the many IGA stores in southeast Missouri and parts of Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee to be supplied from the Wetterau Grocery Co., which has its regional warehouse in Scott City.

The Wetterau-IGA relationship is part of the overall affiliatory organization.

Besides groceries, Wetterau supplies other services to the IGA retailers such as advertising, promotion, engineering and accounting.

In charge of the servicing of the Childs store since it opened in 1950 is G. H. Creglow who is the Wetterau grocery supervisor for 25 IGA stores in this area.

Mr. Child's merchandizing techniques through the years has won him recognition on a number of occasions. In 1956, he won a new automobile for the best display of a flour company's product and two years later won a prize for having the best display of a soup company's products.

Mr. Childs said he has attempted to modernize his stores each year and to keep abreast with the latest in merchandizing practices.

Mr. Childs is a member of the Grace Methodist Church and the Rotary Club.

RESEARCH AND PLEASURE

Remember how you used to munch peanuts while you watched a good television program? Or while you read an interesting book? Before you started counting calories, that is?

Tragedy struck those happy times when you learned that every single goober was loaded with all the things that negate any honest effort toward weight control. You discovered that if you had to eat while you watched or read, you could eat celery and like it. And who wants to eat celery at times like those?

There was an era of gloom. But into the crises stepped, of all things, the government's Agricultural Research Service. The world brightened.

ARS scientists came up with a process for removing about two-thirds of the oil and calories from peanuts. The processed product still has the shape, flavor and aroma of ordinary roasted peanuts, plus a tremendous appeal to the calory-counter. Those, if any, who still prefer to chomp celery can of course do so.

This is just one of the scores marked up during the last year by research. Along the same diet line was the development of a low-fat cheese made of skim milk. It looks and tastes like very mild Cheddar but contains only 5 to 7 per cent butterfat compared with Cheddar's 31 per cent.

Agricultural research in 1965 was good to the consumer. Scientists continue to add to the list of convenience foods that save time and work. Dry apple flakes for "instant" use were developed; instant sweet potato flakes found themselves being produced commercially be several firms and will probably be appearing in more and more stores. Rice products and wheat products felt the magic touch, too.

Agricultural research did not stop with foods, but moved into fabrics as well. Among such developments was stretch cotton lace, made by an adaptation of the slack mercerization previously perfected by ARS scientists and now being used to make a variety of other all-cotton stretch fabrics. Lace is woven in the usual way and then treated with a solution that makes the fibers swell and crimp to give the lace stretchability. The field here is fitted slips, foundation garments, and lounging and sleeping apparel.

Research gained many goals in 1965. Enough, at any rate, to show us that research is not a far-away something, but is a modern factor that more and more affects our daily lives.

Travel Tax Complexion

by Helen Hennessy
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Constant stay-at-homes are difficult to find these days. Winter vacations are more common and so are weekend trips to visit family, friends or resort areas. Everything is less harried for the woman who plans her cosmetic and clothing needs in advance and packs them well. Select lightweight, nonbreakable plastic containers for beauty aids and pack in a small carrying case. Avoid wrinkled clothing by folding dresses in tissue paper. Take less instead of more clothes—an assortment of drip-drys, knits, mix-and-match outfits, a fold-up raincoat and hood and comfortable shoes. Such a wardrobe can go in one suitcase.

From New Year's Day until after income taxes are paid the secret urge is to pack up and fly away to a new environment. Not all can indulge this desire. Some can and do while the rest of us keep amused jotting down our wishes and needs in preparation for vacation time.

Whether you leave tomorrow or in July, one of your first concerns will be selecting a suitable wardrobe and packing it well. Another concern is keeping your complexion under control. Airline stewardesses who fly through many time zones in their assignments prove a good source for tips on complexion care. American's stewardesses for example, make this point: Most complexions don't care for traveling because travel means change and complexions have a negative reaction to unfamiliar water and climates.

The stewardesses keep their complexion under control by following basic home complexion care. This includes drinking plenty of water, eating green and leafy vegetables, citrus fruits and dairy products and exercising.

They also point out that:

- Travel time is no time to try anything new for the skin.
- Use your favorite astringent or freshener to help keep your skin in balance and use your own special cleanser throughout the trip before washing with soap and water.
- In a soft water area, make sure to remove all soap. And take your own soap to help your skin survive the water change.
- Pamper your skin with a creamy, moisture lotion.
- Avoid fatty foods, rich desserts and an overdose of seafoods while traveling.

When packing look to your slim cosmetic case for comfort and complexion help. There are many small items to take, such as a manicure kit, a needle and thread and pins. Before each trip, make a list of toiletry needs and try to pack them in lightweight, nonbreakable plastic containers. Fill plastic containers no higher than three-quarters.

Wherever you go, you will want to include sunglasses and a squeeze bottle of eye lotion to relieve eye fatigue.

Beef: The Busy-Day Budget-Way

When budget-minded ground beef is coupled with staples from the cupboard, high fashion beef stroganoff comes off the quick and easy way. Canned tomato paste and beef consommé are instant flavor partners for the sauce, while evaporated milk blends the whole to the desired rich creaminess. As the savory beef mixture simmers in the skillet, noodles can be cooked to complete the dish.

Quick Beef Stroganoff

¼ cup butter
1 medium onion, sliced
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1½ pounds ground beef
⅓ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
1 can (10½ oz.) beef consommé
1 cup evaporated milk

Melt butter in a large skillet. Add onion, green pepper and ground beef. Fry over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until meat is browned and onions are tender. Remove from heat. Sprinkle in flour, a little at a time, blending well after each addition. Add salt, pepper, garlic powder and Worcestershire sauce; stir to blend well. Slowly stir in tomato paste, consommé and evaporated milk. Cover skillet and simmer over low heat until thickened slightly, about 15 to 20 minutes. Serve over hot cooked noodles. Makes 6 servings.

AN EXPLANATION IS DUE

Most Missourians, and Americans as well, have assumed that when the presidential-ordered bombings in North Viet Nam have resumed, some logical selection of targets would be made.

Out state's senior U.S. Senator, Stuart Symington, again pointed out this week that our targets in North Viet Nam in recent days have included such "vital" installations as buses and empty barracks. Just why such useless targets are being elected is beyond comprehension.

In our view, if the U. S. is to bomb North Viet Nam with any hope of securing our military and political objectives, we must select normal and obvious military targets. We must, in a word, attack North Vietnamese power stations, petroleum dumps and docks and harbors if we are to achieve any degree of efficiency and effectiveness with our air superiority.

We agree with Senator Symington that selecting the proper military targets in no way escalates the U. S. effort in Viet Nam. Instead, basing targets on strategic effectiveness assures our efforts will not have to be increased.

Our state's senior Senator bases his information on a study of actual conditions in Viet Nam and upon a qualified study of our selected targets of communist installations. He is well qualified to do so, serving as the nation's first Secretary of the Air Force.

The American people, who are asked to support this nation's war effort in Viet Nam on mere faith alone, deserve an explanation of the present policy that seems determined to make our air effort ineffective and of little military consequence.

Surely there is an answer. But at the moment, we're unable to anticipate what it could be.

Walker Childs at Sikeston

The new supermarket which opened at Sikeston this morning is the second largest IGA store service from the Wetteran Grocery warehouse at Scott City.

The Scott City facility supplies groceries and services to about 90 stores in parts of five states.

The new market, Mr. C's IGA Foodliner, is operated by Childs Foods, Inc., and joins the Childs IGA Foodliner on Broadway in the organization, headed by Walker G. Childs.

Among facilities at the new store is a 17-stool lunch counter and a delicatessen.

The store is housed in a 115-by-138 foot building which is of total masonry construction. Air conditioning is provided by a 40-ton unit.

There are 80-feet of refrigerated produce and a 72-foot meat case with an open front cooler for smoked meat.

In the dairy department is a 20-foot cheese rack and a 12-foot open front cooler for milk and other dairy products.

A "twin island" 68-foot frozen food section will permit shopping from either side.

The delicatessen includes two ovens, two ranges, stainless steel work tables and sinks, an 11-foot bakery case, an eight-foot refrigerated case and an eight-foot steam table.

Total investment for the new facility has been estimated at from $400,000 to $450,000 with more than $250,000 of that sum going for fixtures.

Parking will be provided for about 150 cars on the asphalt lot to the front of the building.

At the brick and glass front are two entrances separated by a glass panel. The side construction is of shadow wall with a random pattern.

WHAT A DAY

An out-of-season day, when it comes, is a delicious surprise. When such a day comes in summer, it is cool and steel blue and slices through the parched earth and humid skies. When it comes in winter it is warm and lilting, and makes one hunger for spring nights with curtains fluttering out of open windows.

An out-of-season day is a fantasy, and impossibility. But it springs out suddenly like a stubborn crocus blooming through concrete, and surprises even the most taciturn of people. There is something irresistible about June-in-January sun slyly melting the snow that was laid by the winter's wrath; or, conversely, ice-blue clouds and air filtering through summer's flowers. Thus Nature flirts with the earth, taunting her with promises to come, with memories of seasons gone by.

Supreme Court Upholds Rights Law

WASHINGTON AP -- The Supreme Court upheld yesterday the federal government's right to invoke two 1870 laws and bring conspiracy charges in cases of anticivil rights terrorism.

Specifically, the high court approved federal prosecution of 17 persons accused in the 1964 slaying of three civil rights workers near Philadelphia, Miss., and six indicted in the fatal shooting on a Georgia highway also in 1964 of Lemuel Penn., a Negro educator from Washington, D. C.

In both cases, the court overturned decisions by U. S. district judges which threw out federal charges.

The decision in the Philadelphia case was unanimous. The Penn verdict was a split decision in which four judges joined in two partial dissents.

The Mississippi case involved charges against three law officers and 14 other persons.

Congress takes a big whack at the appropriation asked by some Federal agency that far exceeded its expectations and thus gets credit for economizing.

Easy Blueberry Shortcakes

Often as folks may spend many waking hours telling one another about their diets, desserts are still definitely IN! And no matter how many new desserts are created or discovered, none can ever quite compete with the old-fashioned goodness of shortcakes smothered with fruit. None, that is, except these newer, easier-to-prepare shortcakes that are made with giant-sized refrigerated biscuits and canned blueberry pie filling.

These biscuits are sized just right because they're big enough to satisfy the hungriest. Dipped first in sugar, they bake to flaky perfection. Then the pie filling can be spooned right from the can to fill and top each fragrant hot puff. If you like, add a perky dollop of whipped cream. Serve shortcakes like these and diets will go out the door as the dessert enters!

Easy Blueberry Shortcakes

1 can refrigerated deluxe-size layered flaky biscuits
¼ cup sugar
1 No. 2 can (2 cups) blueberry pie filling
Heavy cream, whipped
Oven: 400° Yield: 5 shortcakes

Separate dough into 10 biscuits. Place one biscuit on top of another; firmly press together to form one large shortcake. Repeat with remaining biscuits to form 5 shortcakes. Roll in sugar. Place on greased cookie sheet.

Bake at 400° for 9 to 11 minutes or until golden brown.

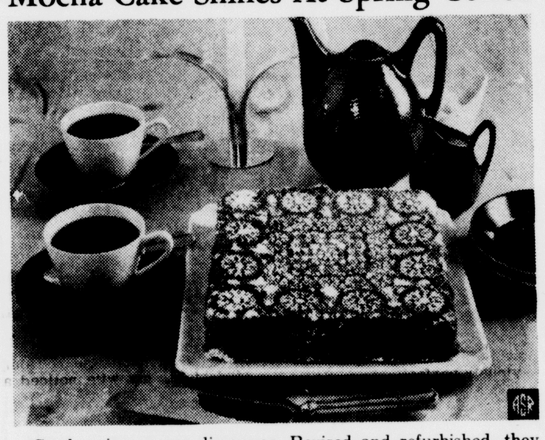
Mocha Cake Shines At Spring Coffee



Good recipes never disappear. Revised and refurbished, they remain popular over the years — like this wonderful Scandinavian Mocha Raisin Cake. In the old days, when breakfast boasted many courses, the Norwegians enjoyed this delicious cake after breakfasting on porridge, fish, potatoes, bread and lots of steaming coffee.

Today, the cake is a kaffeeklatsch favorite, dressed up with a lacy topping of confectioners' sugar. Serve it in the company of your finest coffee, full-flavored and freshly-brewed.

Mocha Raisin Cake

2 cups strong coffee beverage
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons breakfast cocoa, not instant
1 cup seedless raisins, cut up
½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs, unbeaten
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves

Combine coffee, sugar, cocoa and raisins in saucepan. Bring to boil and simmer 10 to 15 minutes. Cool. Cream shortening and add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Add vanilla. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix and sift remaining ingredients. Add, alternating with coffee mixture and stir thoroughly. Bake in greased, floured pan 10 x 10 x 2 inches in moderate oven, 350°, about 1 hour. When cool, place lace paper doily on top. Sift confectioners' sugar on doily; lift off carefully. Cut in squares to serve.

Minor Items Tend To Slow House

JEFFERSON CITY AP-- Long argument over comparatively minor items slowed the House yesterday in its effort to advance the major bills in the stat's billion dollar budget.

At one point, members argued 30 minutes whether the appropriation for the Commissio on Human Rights should be increased by less than $10,000 to allow pay raises for the director, Peter C. Robertson, and his staff.

The final figure was kept at the lower level. It would allow Robertson an increase from $10,000 a year to $12,000 instead of the $15,000 he asked for.

At another point the House battled over whether $166,000 in salary money should be restored to Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg.

Rep. Moran D. Harris, D-St. Clair County, said the governor's recommendation should be restored for the school. But the appropriations chairman, Rep. Bernard Simcoe, D-Callaway County, said the same formula was used for all the state colleges and an error was found in the governor's recommendation for Central State.

The only change in the four bills advanced was a reduction of $10,000 in the repairs and replacements item for the penitentiary in Jefferson City. It was made at the request of the corrections department.

The committee's figures for the mental health, correctional and higher educational institutions otherwise were accepted by the House.

For mental health and correctional institutions, a total of $52,158,959 in general revenue, a reduction of about a quarter million from the governor's recommendation.

For public health and welfare $66,486,370 in general revenue, an increase in the governor's figure of about $56,000--mostly to provide one-step pay raises for merit system employes.

Higher education, $72,916,639, over the governor's recommendation.

Legislative pay and expenses $1,931,307.

Monday the House passed two budget bills and advanced three others.

Missouri Press Report

by Edward V. Long

Congress voted approval for $13.1 billion additional defense funds to help meet our military commitment in Viet Nam.

Most of these dollars will help buy ammunition, helicopters and aircraft, bombs and many other military items needed by U.S. and South Vietnamese fighting forces. Around $275 million will be used for economic aid in South Viet Nam.

Also included in this bill is $1 million for the construction of classrooms at Fort Leonard Wood in Pulaski County, Missouri.

Am convinced we must continue to support our boys in Viet Nam with whatever they need until some decent, peaceful solution can be found for Southeast Asia. We may then be a step closer to achieving the full and lasting peace we all hope and pray for.

My Senate subcommittee held public hearings recently on industrial espionage in the drug industry.

We heard testimony from a drug wholesaler whose firm was infiltrated by an industrial spy paid by a large drug manufacturer. The spy, who became a regular employee of the wholesaler's firm, was secretly observing the wholesaler's operations and reporting daily to the large drug company.

We were amazed to discover that a single firm provided "spying services" for 40 different drug firms and was actually "double-dealing" with information obtained for these companies.

There is no doubt that this kind of activity is undermining the free enterprise system.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has just awarded a $17.1 million contract to launch major construction on the Stockton Dam and Reservoir.

Completion of Stockton Dam and Reservoir, now scheduled for 1970, will be a great step forward for flood control in Western Missouri. Construction now underway is essential for continued progress on the Kaysinger Bluff Reservoir. Together these projects will provide flood control, electric power, water conservation, and recreation facilities to benefit all Missouri.

The latest report on soil and water conservation resources in Missouri shows that Missouri's 65 soil and conservation districts include 24,948,024 acres of land and 58.7 percent of all farms in Missouri.

Nearly 32,000 Missouri farmers are active members of soil conservation districts.

The U.S. Soil Conservation Service's obligations in the state of Missouri total $3,380,050 this year--up over $300,000 since last year.

Missouri has made outstanding progress in watershed and soil conservation projects during recent years.

Armed Forces

CAMP PENDLETON, CALIF. -- Marine Private Charles T. Dye, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Dye of Route 2, Sikeston, Mo., has completed individual combat training here.

The four-week course included over 200 hours of instruction under simulated combat conditions, covering squad tactics, guerrilla warfare, day and night combat, patrolling and the use of infantry weapons.

His next stop is four weeks of basic specialist training in his military occupational field. Marines to be assigned to infantry units will be taught infantry sub-specialties, such as the machine gun, grenade launcher, rifle or mortar. Marines to be assigned to highly technical specialties will be sent to military technical schools for their specialist training.

Leathernecks bound for the Pacific will receive more training when they report to the Staging Battalion at Camp Pendleton, Calif. This training will emphasize jungle warfare, patrolling, and civic action based on experience gained in Vietnam.

THE DAMPER ON INGENUITY-SOCIALISM

Seated in a restaurant, I overheard a young man answering the arguments of his friends that he go into business for himself. He said:

"I have a good job with plenty of fringe benefits. I work only 8 hours a day. I am sure of a good pension at retirement.

"If I go into business myself I will have to work about twice as many hours per week, will have no assured fringe benefits and no guaranteed pension at retirement. I will have to risk all my savings and go into debt with perhaps one chance in five of winning out. And even if I do succeed, the government will take over half of the profit I might earn. Moreover I shall have to struggle with accounting, reporting, investigations, a flood of legislation and bureaucratic rulings effecting my business. I will have to spend many hours and much money defending myself against accusations the bureaucrats may bring against me. No thank you. No business for me in the present climate of high taxes, government intervention and hostility."

Who knows how many brilliant young men are making similar decisions and what this will do to our country? What would Ford, McCormack, Edison and thousands of their kind have done if they had faced the situation that young men face today? Would our country have achieved the tremendous growth of the past century? Are we stopping at the source the forces that would carry us forward at an even faster clip during the next century?

The ingenuity, daring and ability of men to put forth extraordinary effort if the incentive is high enough is our most priceless asset. Are we frittering it away in return for the hope of a low grade, colorless security of socialism?

New Foods Have Built-In Maid To Help Wife

You don't see her. But the food industry has built a "kitchen maid" into foods. A housewife formerly would work 5 1/2 hours a day to cook for four. Now she can do it in 90 minutes or less.

Research cooked up this new convenience. The food industry spends $100,000,000 a year finding ways to save work, time and money with frozen foods, mixes, concentrates, instants, heat-'n-serves, pre-cooked and prepared foods.

Two-thirds of the items in the grocery stores are new or basically improved.

Most products bought from food stores weren't even on the market a dozen years ago.

What has this cost the consumer? Nothing. According to U.S. Government figures, an hour's work will buy more food in America today than at any other place or time in history.

Food News

Upper income families are different, very different from other types of shoppers and it takes a special kind of know-how to sell them and keep them sold.

That is a major conclusion to be drawn from a study called "Consumer Dynamics in the Super Market." The latest findings deal with upper income shopping habits and attitudes.

The million-dollar study is being conducted by Progressive Grocer Magazine in cooperation with The Kroger Company, the nation's third largest grocery retailer, and the Rueben H. Donnelley Corporation, a leading research firm.

While the findings deal mainly with super market behavior, they should also be of interest to manufacturers seeking to sell upper income families and to other types of retail establishments, according to Robert W. Mueller, publisher of the magazine.

Among the study's findings on upper income families:

They are numerous and growing. In 1935, less than one per cent of all U.S. families earned over $10,000 annually. In 1962 almost 20% of the nation earned over this amount and 7% earned over $15,000 a year. While inflation has reduced the number of "real" dollars available, disposable income for millions of families is much higher than in the past and upper income families truly constitute a "mass" market.

The major upper income group consists of professionals, white collar executives and business proprietors who generally live in the better suburbs; are active socially; own two or more cars; are better educated (98% have a high school diploma; 56% attended college); and are very conscious of their newly-won status.

This group of families, because they consitute the majority in the neighborhoods they live in, can be approached through local newspapers, direct mail, special publications, store displays and store policies.

They are good customers. Upper income families were found above average in buying power for many super market products. They spend the most per major shopping trip ($23.64 in 20 minutes), show a greater fondness for new products and for items which give stores higher profits.

They are difficult to please and highly mobile. Virtually 100% of upper income housewives use the car to shop. They will travel greater distances to find a store which pleases them. In the course of a year, 32% will switch super markets because of dissatisfaction with their current one. This is a much greater turnover than for other kinds of families.

They have marked likes and dislikes. Neatness and cleanliness comes first in their listing of qualities they look for in a store. Next comes quality of meats; selection of meat; courtesy of personnel and quality of produce.

Prices and trading stamps are well down on the list, but personal interviews reveal that one of the main reasons for leaving a store is the feeling that they have been "had" on prices.

They use shopping lists more than other families (79% use some form of list) and those that do use lists buy 43% more than those without lists.

They prefer to do their big shopping on Thursday or Friday (66%) rather than Saturday (25%). They go to the meat counter first; dairy next; frozen foods next; then produce and then baked goods. Only 6% of upper income shoppers pass more than 75 product locations during a shopping trip. By comparison 52% of another group in the study, young married families, pass 75 or more product locations.

They will use "cents off' coupons (93% say they "sometimes" take advantage of such offers; 34% say they "usually" do). They are less interested in saving box tops (61% are "never" interested) and special contests (77% say they "never" enter).

While 46% will "sometimes" take advantage of a premium offer with the purchase of a product, only 9% say they "usually" do, indicating that the product must be one that meets their special set of standards. The mere fact that an item is free has little impact.

They are entertainment minded. Their cheese and cheese-spread sales are 18% more than average; frozen cakes, pies and pastries 44% more; snacks and desserts, plus 22%; frozen cookies and rolls, plus 153%.

They are big givers of cook-outs and patio parties. Wiener buns' sales were 70% above average; sandwich buns, plus 62%; ice cream and sherbets, plus 31%; wieners, plus 6%; soft drinks, plus 18%.

They are frozen food prone. Frozen food purchases in stores serving upper income shoppers were 47% above the average. Outstanding frozen food performances among this group were frozen fruits, 38% above average; juices 144%; vegetables 76%; soups, 48%; pot pies and dinners, 30%; Chinese, Mexican and Italian Foods, 171%.

They are gourmet and quality minded. They are the best customers for lamb, veal, smoked pork and beef and for the more esoteric varieties of produce. They know the differences between hamburger and ground chuck and round. They buy 27% more butter; 39% more cream; 145% more lobster tails; 173% more fresh cut green beans.

They are below average purchasers of non-food products in super markets. Sales of housewares were 39% below average; apparel and accessories, 74% below average; and toys and stationery, 36% below average.

"The upper income family," Progressive Grocer says, "is more likely to be concerned with the consideration of design, of quality and style; and of the product's relation to decor. These qualifications are filled better for them with products from speciality shops."

They are relatively indifferent to most store advertising. The enthusiasm of the upper income customer for food advertising was the least of any group in the Consumer Dynamics study. The reason, according to Progressive Grocer, is that most food ads today are based primarily on prices. The upper income customer is more interested in newness, variety, personal service, uniqueness, and quality with particular emphasis on the meat and produce departments.

It is a fact, the magazine says, that dullness and lack of originality mark the majority of super market advertising. This, rather than lack of interest, accounts for the upper income lack of enthusiasm.

"The more successful advertising which appeals to this special upper income customer shows an awareness of style in layout and type face selection. There is also a common characteristic of good usage of white space in contrast to the run-of-the-mill, black type-filled page. These ads recognize the intelligence of their audience by their careful selection of headlines which are clever, rather than the use of heavy-handed cliches. There is also an attempt by most of these upper-income approaches to be topical and to be more concerned with the customers themselves rather than with trying to copy what the competition is doing."

Grant Given To Kansas City

WASHINGTON AP -- The housing department has approved a $1,029,145 grant to the Jackson County Park Department for land acquisition for park and recreational use in Kansas City, Mo.

Missouri members of Congress said yesterday the grant would cover about half the estimated cost of acquiring 839 acres along Blue Valley Road in Kansas City.

Missouri senators announced Labor Department approval of manpower training projects to cost a total of $1,030,408 for Chillicothe, St. Joseph, Kirksville, St. Louis, Rolla, Marshall, Joplin, Cape Girardeau, Sikeston and Kansas City.

The figures for each city: Chillicothe, $100,49?; St. Joseph $63,607; $48,495 and $67,496 for three programs; Kirksville $39,262; St. Louis, $74,317; Rolla 30,563 and $47,642 two programs; Marshall $178,014; Joplin $69,732; Cape Girardeau, $58,495; Sikeston, $78,007; Kansas City, $80,129 and $94,156 two programs.

CELEBRATE WITH IRISH CUPCAKES

Plan a tea for St. Patrick's Day and make it a special day. These elegant cakes, topped with a creamy frosting and decorated with shamrocks, are bound to please.

IRISH CUPCAKES

1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup Mazola corn oil
1/4 cup milk

Sift flower, baking powder and salt together. Beat egg; gradually add sugar, beating until fluffy. Add vanilla. Combine corn oil and milk in cup; whip with fork until creamy. Add dry ingredients to egg mixture alternately with oil mixture; beat until smooth after each addition. Pour batter into greased and floured cupcake pans. Bake in 350°F. (moderate) oven until cakes test done, 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 36 (1 3/4-inch) cupcakes.

CREAMY FROSTING

1/2 cup margarine
2 1/2 cups sifted confectioners sugar
1 unbeaten egg white
Dash salt
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Stir margarine slightly to soften. Gradually add half the confectioners sugar, beating until smooth. Add egg white and salt; beat until fluffy. Gradually add remaining confectioners sugar, beating well. Fold in vanilla. Color about 1/4 the frosting a delicate green. Frost cakes and decorate with shamrocks.

Uneasiness Still Haunts Cyprus

By ROY ESSOYAN

NICOSIA, Cyprus AP --This pretty little Mediterranean island, racked by civil war two years ago and split into two closely guarded hostile camps since then, gives the appearance of living on borrowed time.

Children attend school behind windows piled high with sandbags. A Turkish Cypriot woman hangs out her wash a few feet from an armed Greek Cypriot soldier who eyes her suspiciously.

Cyprus borrowed another three months of uneasy peace March 16 when the Security Council extended the U. N. peacekeeping operation here till June.

The Security Council resolution was predicated on the hope that "substantial progress toward a solution" would be achieved within three months.

No one in authority here expects any such progress toward a solution before the new deadline.

"Neither the Turkish nor the Greek Cypriots are willing to compromise because neither side is hurting enough," a top Western diplomat observes. "Maybe the only thing that will make them budge is a new explosion of violence."

Both sides agree that withdrawal of the U.N. forces next June 26 as currently scheduled, could provide the spark. U.N. and other diplomats here express the same fear.

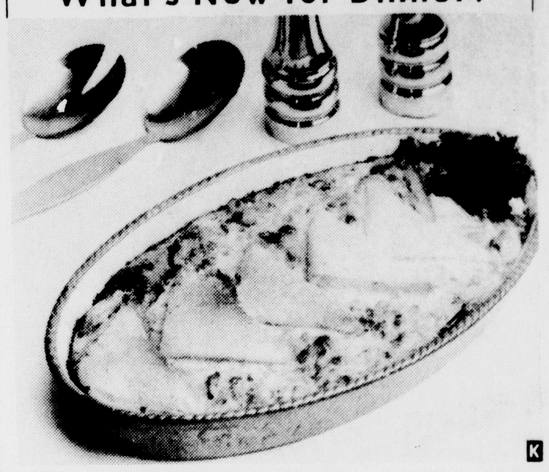
More than 5,000 U.N. peacekeeping troops have kept the two sides at bay for two years, patrolling the heavily barricaded boundaries of the Turkish Cypriot enclaves that were carved out of Nicosia and the rest of Cyprus after the last outbreak of violence two years ago.

Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, is insisting on "Enosis" -- union with Greece.

The Turkish Cypriots demand partition of the island under a federal system, and recognition of the Turkish minority, one-fifth of the island's population, as an equal partner in government.

They insist on retaining the veto power in government they were granted under a constitution approved in 1960 after agreements were signed by Britain, Greece, Turkey and the Cypriot leaders the preceding year.

What's New for Dinner?



Salmon Sandwich Puff tastes more like a party than a penance. It combines bread, milk, egg, cheese and canned salmon in an easy-to-make Lenten recipe.

Canned salmon is one fish in convenient form that is so versatile it can be included often in Lenten menus. Its delicate color and flavor, its fine flaky texture combines beautifully in soups and sauces and with almost any manner of vegetable, potatoes, rice, pasta—even bread.

A good hearty dish, combining salmon and bread, is Salmon Sandwich Puff. It's easy to make and serve, and answers that perennial question, "What's new for dinner?" anytime of the year.

You might serve it solo for lunch, or team it with a cup of hot tomato soup and a crisp vegetable salad for dinner. It's more glamorous than a sandwich, and it's a hot meal rather than a cold one—a good idea this early Lent.

SALMON SANDWICH PUFF

- 6 slices bread, trimmed and cut into triangles
- 7¾-ounce can salmon
- ¾ cup shredded cheese
- 3 eggs, lightly beaten
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon paprika
- dash cayenne
- 1 teaspoon minced onion
- 1½ cups milk

Line buttered 1½-quart baking dish with half the bread. Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Flake salmon. Sprinkle salmon and cheese over bread and top with remaining bread triangles.

Combine eggs, salt, paprika, cayenne, onion, milk and salmon liquid. Pour over ingredients in dish and let stand for 30 minutes. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 1 hour, or until browned and puffed. Serves 4.

Johnson Phoning To Fight Inflation

WASHINGTON AP-- President Johnson has telephoned 25 to 30 business leaders in the past three days to urge a go-slow approach toward capital spending that might fuel inflationary fires.

Deputy press secretary Robert Fleming disclosed this yesterday.

Fleming said Johnson recently has "intensified" his telephone contacts with businessmen, asking them to consider "their own self-interest" and review carefully any plans to spend money for expanding plant and equipment.

The President, according to Fleming, has suggested to those on his phone list that such decisions might best be delayed in view of "the high cost of money and labor and shortages of some materials."

Johnson also has asked government agencies to review their own spending programs in light of the effort to curb inflation, Fleming said.

Believed Part of Missing Sub Found

KILKEE, Ireland AP -- Police in this little seaside village on the west coast of Ireland yesterday recovered a three - foot long cylindrical object they said was marked: "U.S. Thresher . . . radioactive."

It is believed to be part of the American nuclear submarine Thresher, lost three years ago in the Atlantic with all its 129-man crew.

The U. S. Embassy in Dublin and Irish military authorities were notified of the find. It was placed in a locked police store to await the arrival of the experts from Dublin.

"...the Small Business Administration has been authorized to make 'Economic Injury Disaster Loans' to small business concerns located in Lancaster County from now until November 30, 1966. This is Federal money, of course. Real money is a little harder to come by."

MOTHERHOOD

Mary, the Christ long slain, passed silently,
Following the children joyously
astir
Under the cedrus and the olive-tree,
Pausing to let their laughter float to her.
Each voice an echo of a voice more dear,
She saw a little Christ in every face.
Then came another woman gliding near
To watch the tender life that filled the place.
And Mary sought the woman's hand, and spoke:
"I know thee not, yet know thy memory tossed
With all a thousand dreams their eyes evoke
Who bring to thee a child beloved and lost.
"I, too, have rocked my Little One."
And He was fair!
Oh, fairer than the fairest son,
And like its rays through amber spun
His sun-bright hair!
Still I can see it shine and shine."
"Even so," the woman said,
"was mine."
"His ways were ever darling ways"--
And Mary smiled--
"So soft, so clinging! Glad relays
Of love were all His precious days.
My Little Child!
My vanished star! My music fled!"
"Even so was mine," the woman said.
And Mary whispered: "Tell me, thou,
Of thine." And she:
"Oh, mine was rosy as a bough
Blooming with roses, sent somehow,
To bloom for me!
His balmy fingers left a thrill
Deep in my breast that warms me still."
Then she gazed down some wilder, darker hour,
And said -- when Mary questioned, knowing not:
"Who art thou, mother of so sweet a flower?"
"I am the mother of Iscariot."

The wages of sin must be ill health. At any rate, every day we hear of people well enough to commit crimes who immediately become too sick to pay any penalties.

CANCELLED STAMP

Long ago we predicted the decline of the obnoxious trading stamp and urged men to adopt the slogan, "Lips that lap mucilage shall never touch mine." Our prediction is coming true. The absurd claim that trading stamps (costing about 2 cents on the dollar) do not increase retail prices is being demolished in the most forceful way--by competing merchants who don't give stamps and can offer lower prices. Daitch Shopwell, an Eastern supermarket, is giving up stamps and passing on a saving of some $2,500,000 a year in the form of lower prices. Waldbaum's another supermarket, is abandoning stamps and cutting prices. Firms have abandoned stamps in other areas to meet vigorous price competition. Low prices, not a sticky collection of books that can be traded for gimcracks, appeal to sensible people. Customers of several Food Fair stores, asked for their opinions, preferred reduced prices to trading stamps. A wise man once said that you can't fool all of the people all of the time.

ADVENTISTS STAND FIRM

Educators representing the Seventh-day Adventists' 65 schools in California, Utah, and Nevada held a meeting recently in Middleton, Calif. They voted to reject an offer of a million dollars in Federal money for the paraochial institutions involved. The resolution passed by the 300 delegates said: "That which the Government supports it also has the right to direct." It is refreshing to find a group standing firm against efforts of the Federal forces to infiltrate its ranks. Such action is directly in line with constitional principles and affirms the right of states, groups and individuals to retail certain key powers for themselves.

How To Create A Family Of 'Eggheads' For Easter Fun

A family of eggheads will add new dimension to your Easter egg decorating this year. All it takes is a little imagination and a few inexpensive supplies.

For a starter, join your youngsters in creating a family of Easter bunnies.

Use large hard - boiled eggs for the parents, small eggs for their offspring.

Q-tips or cotton swabs make easy - to - use brushes for painting on faces. You'll have a fresh brush for each color, and you'll also find them handy for making bunny arms and legs.

A few drops of vegetable dye in a quarter cup of water gives a good, deep color. For best results, scrub the eggs with a little scouring powder and rinse well before painting.

Since it's easier to paint faces on eggs when they're standing up, attach the feet first.

Snap a cotton swab in half, and glue halves to wide end of egg for paws. Use white liquid glue. When the glue has dried, stand the egg up and paint on a cute bunny face.

Ears are easy, too. Draw outlines on white construction paper. Make ears about three inches long for larger bunnies, one and one-half inches for smaller ones. Paint centers pink. Then cut out and glue to egg head.

For clothes, circle lower half of the egg with a small piece of construction paper or cotton fabric. Glue ends together in back. Add buttons and bows as desired. Final step is gluing on arms. Wrap stems of cotton swabs with colored plastic tape and glue in place.

NEW LOOK IN EASTER EGGS—Add new dimension to your Easter egg decorations by creating a family of egghead bunnies. Q-tips or cotton swabs make easy-to-use paint brushes; double for arms and legs. Cut ears from construction paper; glue on paper or cotton fabric for bunny clothes. Dip swabs in vegetable dye or water colors to paint on cute bunny faces.

DOES IT MAKE SENSE?

President Johnson's insistence that the nation can have both "guns and butter" was never more obvious than when he recommended this week the expenditure of 1.4 million for a courthouse-federal office building at Cape Girardeau for the approaching fiscal year.

We have nothing against Cape Girardeau now would we in any way attempt to hinder this federal project since there are scores of other communities across the nation scheduled to receive similar gifts from Uncle Sam.

But the nation is now involved and engaged in a major war, despite the absence of formal declarations, and one of the difficulties with staging this war is the lack of public understanding and the absence of general realization of our stake in Southeast Asia.

It becomes even more difficult to convince Americans that Viet Nam is of vital concern if Uncle Sam continues to engage in wild spending orgies that are completely unnecessary at this moment.

Regardless of the need for a federal building at Cape Girardeau, the need for full American support of U. S. troops in South Viet Nam is of far greater consequence.

President Johnson's budget clearly indicates the administration believes we can support both the war effort abroad and full-scale federal spending at home. But a $6.5 billion expected deficit for the approaching budget period certainly belies this belief.

American taxpayers can be excused for their confusion at least year's tax cut, designed to stimulate the economy, and this year's proposal to restore the tax cut to pay for our war effort in Viet Nam.

Perhaps billion-dollar deficits to build federal buildings at Cape Girardeau and elsewhere, tax cuts and tax restorations within six months of each other, and a declaration that we can afford the largest defense budget and the largest peacetime budget at the same time make perfectly good sense to the average taxpayer. But we wouldn't bet on it, come April 15.

MORE REALISTIC BOUNDARIES

Some initial efforts toward the establishment of more realistic city boundaries for Dexter are being made, initiated by the city government.

Extension of the city limits has generated considerable controversy in the community before, and efforts to make any drastic changes have so far failed.

But we think any realistic appraisal of the community, and its present boundary line, would lead to but one conclusion--that changes need to be made.

Dexter has outgrown its boundaries. Look at a map of the city and see for yourself.

Exactly where the boundary lines should be, should be determined only by a close study. And, as in any controversial situation, perhaps some efforts should be made to reach an agreement among all parties concerned that would meet at least most of the needs of the city and at the same time not work too great a hardship on any one individual.

But compromise does not mean "giving in" to a minority. The best interests of ALL the citizens of the community should be the only consideration. There is no other way for the city government to aproach the situation.

JUST EQUALITY, PLEASE

EVERY NOW and then some small operator, a candy retailer or dry cleaner, will buck up and give rise to resentment over being a tax collector for the government.

Close attention to many small details in connection with the required deductions from payroll checks takes hours out of the work week. At the end of the quarter, and at the end of each year, the many deducts must be balanced out, and summary forms must agree with the total of individual deductions. It does take time, and insofar as the government is concerned, it is all for free.

So it is only natural that now and then someone kicks over the traces, and raises a fuss.

Naturally, no individual ever wins. In some cases the objector may even end his one-man rebellion by paying a hefty penalty.

AS A matter of fact, small business has long been the forgotten man, the step-child of our economy.

Big Labor, represented by powerful unions, operates free and clear of the restraints imposed on the business community. It enjoys immunities and privileges which are not granted to the other side.

Independent business asks no specific or special favors. Give it equality under the law and it will make its own way, and at the same time, build prosperity for all.

It will even act as tax collector for the largest business of all--the ever-present, overriding government.

Uneasiness Still Haunts Cyprus

By ROY ESSOYAN

NICOSIA, Cyprus AP --This pretty little Mediterranean island, racked by civil war two years ago and split into two closely guarded hostile camps since then, gives the appearance of living on borrowed time.

Children attend school behind windows piled high with sandbags. A Turkish Cypriot woman hangs out her wash a few feet from an armed Greek Cypriot soldier who eyes her suspiciously.

A child plays in the shadow of a heavily guarded pillbox. A U.N. soldier watches warily from a nearby rooftop. A cow grazes unattended on a narrow strip of no-man's-land, the so-called "Green Line" that cuts across this divided city.

Cyprus borrowed another three months of uneasy peace March 16 when the Security Council extended the U. N. peacekeeping operation here till June.

The Security Council resolution was predicated on the hope that "substantial progress toward a solution" would be achieved within three months.

No one in authority here expects any such progress toward a solution before the new deadline.

"Neither the Turkish nor the Greek Cypriots are willing to compromise because neither side is hurting enough," a top Western diplomat observes. "Maybe the only thing that will make them budge is a new explosion of violence."

Both sides agree that withdrawal of the U.N. forces next June 26 as currently scheduled, could provide the spark. U.N. and other diplomats here express the same fear.

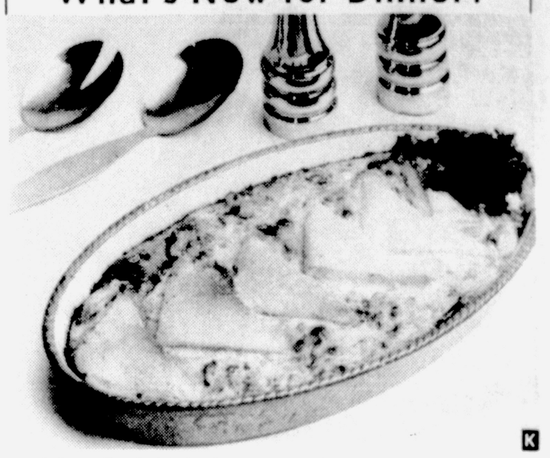
More than 5,000 U.N. peacekeeping troops have kept the two sides at bay for two years, patrolling the heavily barricaded boundaries of the Turkish Cypriot enclaves that were carved out of Nicosia and the rest of Cyprus after the last outbreak of violence two years ago.

Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, is insisting on "Enosis" -- union with Greece.

The Turkish Cypriots demand partition of the island under a federal system, and recognition of the Turkish minority, one-fifth of the island's population, as an equal partner in government.

They insist on retaining the veto power in government they were granted under a constitution approved in 1960 after agreements were signed by Britain, Greece, Turkey and the Cypriot leaders the preceding year.

What's New for Dinner?



Salmon Sandwich Puff tastes more like a party than a penance. It combines bread, milk, egg, cheese and canned salmon in an easy-to-make Lenten recipe.

Canned salmon is one fish in convenient form that is so versatile it can be included often in Lenten menus. Its delicate color and flavor, its fine flaky texture combines beautifully in soups and sauces and with almost any manner of vegetable, potatoes, rice, pasta—even bread.

A good hearty dish, combining salmon and bread, is Salmon Sandwich Puff. It's easy to make and serve, and answers that perennial question, "What's new for dinner?" anytime of the year.

You might serve it solo for lunch, or team it with a cup of hot tomato soup and a crisp vegetable salad for dinner. It's more glamorous than a sandwich, and it's a hot meal rather than a cold one—a good idea this early Lent.

SALMON SANDWICH PUFF

- 6 slices bread, trimmed and cut into triangles
- 7¾-ounce can salmon
- ¾ cup shredded cheese
- 3 eggs, lightly beaten
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon paprika
- dash cayenne
- 1 teaspoon minced onion
- 1½ cups milk

Line buttered 1½-quart baking dish with half the bread. Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Flake salmon. Sprinkle salmon and cheese over bread and top with remaining bread triangles.

Combine eggs, salt, paprika, cayenne, onion, milk and salmon liquid. Pour over ingredients in dish and let stand for 30 minutes. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 1 hour, or until browned and puffed. Serves 4.

Tobacco Advertising 'To Stick'

NEW YORK AP -- Major tobacco companies have agreed to stick with the industry's voluntary advertising code despite this withdrawal of P. Lorillard & Co., a spokesman for the code said today.

Lorillard said it withdrew from the 15-month-old code so it could list on its packs the amount of tar and nicotine the cigarettes contain.

Under the code, such a listing may be made only if the company either proves its claims have health significance or if it disclaims any health significance. The Federal Trade Commission recently relaxed its advertising restrictions.

Robert B. Meyner, administrator of the code and former governor of New Jersey, said Lorillard never had asked permission to use any advertising that listed tar and nicotine content.

Two other companies, American Tobacco and U. S. Tobacco, did and were turned down because they did not back up their requests with data, Meyner said.

Meyner said the two companies and the other code members, Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.; Larus & Brother Co., Inc.; Ligget & Myers Tobacco Corp.; Philip Morris Inc.; the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; and Stephano Brothers, had agreed to stay with the code.

The tobacco companies set up this code as an aftermath of the surgeon general's report in 1964 linking smoking and lung cancer.

U.S. Policy Under Review

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. AP -- Ambassador Arthur J. Golberg said yesterday that the whole question of U. S. policy on China is under review, but that the U. S. position on China's U.N. representation remains unchanged.

Goldberg told a news conference Nationalist China and the Peking government are firmly opposed to a so-called two-Chinas proposal under which both would hold U.N. seats.

He added that Red China had been seriously hurt at the United Nations by what he called its self-isolation and that today it probably would get fewer votes than it did last November when the assembly voted 47-47 on the question of seating Peking, a loss for Peking.

The U. S. representative expressed hope that the Chinese Communists would end their isolation, agree to take part in U.N. disarmament talks and declare their opposition to war as a means of settling disputes.

"The acid test," he said, "is whether Red China is ready to end its isolation."

GOD DOES IT BETTER!

It comes upon you quietly as you look and listen and reflect:
the simple fact that God does it
so much better!

Man makes a jet aircraft
whine, an outboard motor roar,
a locomotive toot, a siren
screech, a radio squawk, a foundry bellow;
God makes a baby laugh.

Man lights a 'great white way';
God lights a Milky Way.

Man erects a steeple spire,
a rocket gantry, an 80-story
skyscraper, a television antenna to jut into the heavens;
God fashions a towering redwood to stretch toward the cooling rains and warming sunshine, and a mountain peak encircled by a halo of clouds.

Man paints a landscape on a canvas;
God paints a landscape on every horizon.

Man launches a billion-dollar missile to speed a satellite into orbit thousands of miles out in space;
God clears a path by which a child's prayer might wing an unerring course through the realms of space and time to heaven's communication center.

Man built the Seven Wonders
of the World;
God created the World.

Man gives us a baseball park,
a golf course, a bowling alley,
a circus, a skating rink;
God gives us a forest sparkling in the morning, a rushing stream, a mirrored lake, a snow-capped peak, a bounding deer elusive in the sight, a moonlit night, a tossing ocean.

screen;
God sends a dream.

Man designs spears and knives
and arrows and guns and planes
and tanks and bombs that he might fight his brother and die;
God designed a hill and a cross
and an open tomb that man might choose to live forever.
Man bids us 'struggle and perish';
God bids us 'receive and cherish'.

God does it so much better.

FISH FOR A WONDERFUL MEAL

A fish dish, impressive enough for your most discerning guests... and yet within family-meal budgets, too...is a whole stuffed fish. Point up the flavor of the fish with a smooth, flavorful sauce, made from condensed mushroom soup. Condensed soups always assure you satin-smooth, perfectly seasoned sauces.

Incidentally, if you can't get a whole striped bass at your market, substitute red snapper, bluefish, mackerel, whitefish, or cod.

BAKED STUFFED FISH WITH MUSHROOM-PIMIENTO SAUCE

1 can (2 ounces) mushroom stems and pieces, drained
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
1/4 teaspoon salt
Generous dash each crushed marjoram, pepper, crushed thyme
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup small dry bread cubes
3-pound whole striped bass, boned
1 can (10-1/2 ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1/3 cup water
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 tablespoon sherry (optional)

In saucepan, cook mushrooms, 2 tablespoons onion, 2 tablespoons parsley, celery, and seasonings in 1/4 cup butter until vegetables are tender. Remove from heat; stir in bread cubes. Lightly stuff fish; fasten with toothpicks or skewers. Place on rack in shallow baking pan; brush with 1 tablespoon melted butter. Bake at 350°F. for 1/2 hour or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Meanwhile, in saucepan, cook remaining onion and parsley in 1 tablespoon butter until onion is tender. Gradually blend in remaining ingredients. Heat; stir now and then. Serve over fish. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

An old Englishman I met in Africa was reminiscing about his explorations in earlier days, and the shock of one culture meeting another the first time. "Can you imagine," he said, "people so primitive that they love to eat the embryo of certain birds, and slices from the belly of certain animals? And grind up grass seed, make it into a paste, burn it over a fire, then smear it with a greasy mess they extract from the mammary fluid of animals?"

While I shuddered at such barbarism, he went on: "What I've been describing, of course, is a breakfast of bacon and eggs and buttered toast."

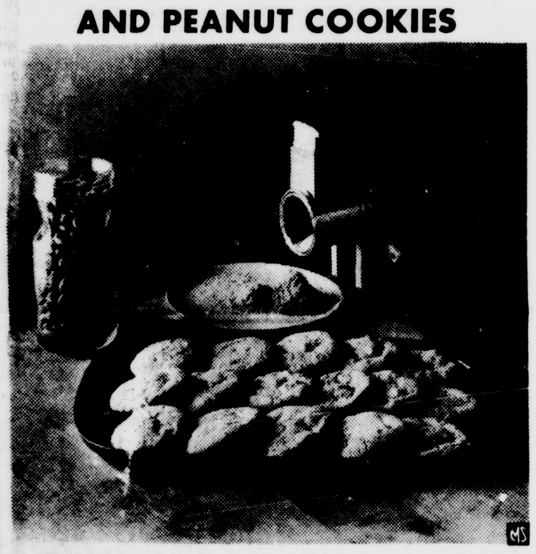
EVERYBODY LOVES PEANUTS — AND PEANUT COOKIES



At parties, the ball park, the zoo—or wherever people gather for a good time—peanuts are in demand. For Americans of all ages are addicted to peanuts. But it's a good habit—one that nutritionists highly approve—because peanuts furnish valuable nutrients as well as energy.

Many cooks fail to appreciate the versatility of peanuts as a recipe ingredient. The little nuts team well with a wide range of other foods, adding a provocative flavor and distinctive texture that have long been familiar to South American and African cooks.

Planters Dry Roasted Peanuts, with their unusual crispness and tangy taste, are irresistible whether eaten by the handful, or used in recipes. Here they lend their flavor and texture to a thin, crisp cookie that is delicately spiced with cinnamon.

To grate peanuts for Planters Cinnamon Wafers, use a blender, a crank-style nut grater, or seal the nuts in a plastic bag and crush with a rolling pin.

PLANTERS CINNAMON WAFERS

4 egg whites
1 1/4 cups sugar
2 cups grated Planters Dry Roasted Peanuts
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

Beat egg whites until frothy. Gradually beat in sugar and continue beating until very stiff and glossy. Fold in grated Planters Dry Roasted Peanuts, vanilla, salt and cinnamon. Drop heaping teaspoonsful 2 inches apart onto baking sheets covered with ungreased paper. Bake in a slow oven (325°F.) about 20 minutes, or until cookies are set and lightly browned. Immediately remove from baking sheets.

Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

Small Grocers Banded Together for Survival During Depression

Often the question is asked "Just what is IGA?" . . : and "how can it be a chain but with every store home-owned?" The answers to these and other questions about the Independent Grocers Association are found in the distant past. During the depression years, only big business was able to survive. This meant that corporate food chains (those controled outright by a central headquarters) who were doing business only on a cash basis were able to survive and small grocers using credit soon went out of business.

IGA had been founded in the late 1920's but the need for joining together for strength came in the 1930's. During this period, more and more small grocery stores heard about, and joined with wholesale houses to obtain supplies at costs reasonably close to the chains.

Then, after World War II, even wholesale houses found themselves in the same position as the small stores some years earlier. They had salesmen, credit, unprofitable delivery, too many non-food items, and other related troubles. New products were being marketed every day and room had to be found for them. With the guidance of IGA headquarters, wholesale houses everywhere became strictly IGA supply depots, eliminating mark-up in merchandise, and realizing their own revenue on delivery charges and minute cash discounts offered by manufacturers on truck load and car load lots.

IGA supply depots went even further. They came up with a program of merchandising, advertising, accounting, engineering, financing, distribution and perishable foods to offer member stores complete service from them.

This was the program which brought IGA member stores around the world to the position of being the greatest in number, and as of 1962, second only to one corporate chain in yearly total sales. IGA's total national sales consistently top those of some of the giant chains.

But, the greatest strength of IGA lies in one fact: All member stores are home-owned and homeoperated. These independent business men are joined together through a supply depot, agreeing to meet certain standards of good food business, and paying a small membership fee to maintain a national staff of buyers, counselors, and management.

The IGA supply depots are operated on the same basis, cooperating on workable food distribution plans. All of the supply depots are owned and operated on local levels.

Under this system, every IGA store owner can buy merchandise in whatever quantity he wishes. Today, an IGA store owner buys food at the manufacturers' cost on their largest selling unit, the car-load. In the old days an independent store owner bought by quantities, paying a higher cost per case for small orders than for large ones.

Orders for case-lot merchandise are sent into the supply depot on specially provided forms, processed through modern business machines, and delivered to the proper store at a specified time at least once weekly--more often if the store

By not using salesmen, trading stamps, credit and delivery, IGA store owners and the supply depot bring food costs to a minimum and offer customers low prices every day.

Tobacco Advertising 'To Stick'

NEW YORK AP -- Major tobacco companies have agreed to stick with the industry's voluntary advertising code despite this withdrawal of P. Lorillard & Co., a spokesman for the code said today.

Lorillard said it withdrew from the 15-month-old code so it could list on its packs the amount of tar and nicotine the cigarettes contain.

Under the code, such a listing may be made only if the company either proves its claims have health significance or if it disclaims any health significance. The Federal Trade Commission recently relaxed its advertising restrictions.

Robert B. Meyner, administrator of the code and former governor of New Jersey, said Lorillard never had asked permission to use any advertising that listed tar and nicotine content.

Two other companies, American Tobacco and U. S. Tobacco, did and were turned down because they did not back up their requests with data, Meyner said.

Meyner said the two companies and the other code members, Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.; Larus & Brother Co., Inc.; Ligget & Myers Tobacco Corp.; Philip Morris Inc.; the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; and Stephano Brothers, had agreed to stay with the code.

The tobacco companies set up this code as an aftermath of the surgeon general's report in 1964 linking smoking and lung cancer.

During World War II an Army doctor at a remote dispensary in the South Pacific was puzzled about the treatment of one of his patients. Since his facilities were inadequate, he radioed the nearest base hospital: "Have a case of beriberi. What shall I do?"

Someone at the hospital radioed back: "Give it to the Marines-- they'll drink anything!"

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. AP -- Ambassador Arthur J. Golberg said yesterday that the whole question of U. S. policy on China is under review, but that the U. S. position on China's U.N. representation remains unchanged.

Goldberg told a news conference Nationalist China and the Peking government are firmly opposed to a so-called two-Chinas proposal under which both would hold U.N. seats.

He added that Red China had been seriously hurt at the United Nations by what he called its self-isolation and that today it probably would get fewer votes than it did last November when the assembly voted 47-47 on the question of seating Peking, a loss for Peking.

The U. S. representative expressed hope that the Chinese Communists would end their isolation, agree to take part in U.N. disarmament talks and declare their opposition to war as a means of settling disputes.

"The acid test," he said, "is whether Red China is ready to end its isolation."

GOD DOES IT BETTER!

It comes upon you quietly as you look and listen and reflect:
the simple fact that God does it
so much better!

Man makes a jet aircraft
whine, an outboard motor roar,
a locomotive toot, a siren
screech, a radio squawk, a foundry bellow;
God makes a baby laugh.

Man lights a 'great white way';
God lights a Milky Way.

Man erects a steeple spire,
a rocket gantry, an 80-story
skyscraper, a television antenna to jut into the heavens;
God fashions a towering redwood to stretch toward the cooling rains and warming sunshine, and a mountain peak encircled by a halo of clouds.

Man paints a landscape on a canvas;
God paints a landscape on every horizon.

Man launches a billion-dollar missile to speed a satellite into orbit thousands of miles out in space;
God clears a path by which a child's prayer might wing an unerring course through the realms of space and time to heaven's communication center.

Man built the Seven Wonders
of the World;
God created the World.

Man gives us a baseball park,
a golf course, a bowling alley,
a circus, a skating rink;
God gives us a forest sparkling in the morning, a rushing stream, a mirrored lake, a snow-capped peak, a bounding
deer elusive in the sight, a moonlit night, a tossing ocean.

Man animates a television
screen;
God sends a dream.

Man designs spears and knives
and arrows and guns and planes
and tanks and bombs that he might fight his brother and die;
God designed a hill and a cross
and an open tomb that man might choose to live forever.
Man bids us 'struggle and perish';
God bids us 'receive and cherish'.

God does it so much better.

FISH FOR A WONDERFUL MEAL

A fish dish, impressive enough for your most discerning guests... and yet within family-meal budgets, too...is a whole stuffed fish. Point up the flavor of the fish with a smooth, flavorful sauce, made from condensed mushroom soup. Condensed soups always assure you satin-smooth, perfectly seasoned sauces.

Incidentally, if you can't get a whole striped bass at your market, substitute red snapper, bluefish, mackerel, whitefish, or cod.

BAKED STUFFED FISH WITH MUSHROOM-PIMIENTO SAUCE

1 can (2 ounces) mushroom stems and pieces, drained
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
1/4 teaspoon salt
Generous dash each crushed marjoram, pepper, crushed thyme
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup small dry bread cubes
3-pound whole striped bass, boned
1 can (10-1/2 ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1/3 cup water
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 tablespoon sherry (optional)

In saucepan, cook mushrooms, 2 tablespoons onion, 2 tablespoons parsley, celery, and seasonings in 1/4 cup butter until vegetables are tender. Remove from heat; stir in bread cubes. Lightly stuff fish; fasten with toothpicks or skewers. Place on rack in shallow baking pan; brush with 1 tablespoon melted butter. Bake at 350°F. for 1/2 hour or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Meanwhile, in saucepan, cook remaining onion and parsley in 1 tablespoon butter until onion is tender. Gradually blend in remaining ingredients. Heat; stir now and then. Serve over fish. Makes 6 to 8 servings.
